

THE TIMES Tomorrow

Ring... Bernard Levin sings the praises of the masterly Hall-Solti Bayreuth production... of steel Business News begins a three-part series on how Britain's engineering giants are riding the recovery... and confidence Recession and sensible sobriety normally go together on the fashion scene: the return of glamour proves that things are getting better Off with the dance Roger Scruton bemoans the passing of quick-quick-slow and its replacement in the palais by a lonely sexual parody On with the mini Part two of our series on the rise and fall of Biba, symbol of the Swinging Sixties

US 'show of force' criticized

President Miguel de la Madrid of Mexico opened talks with President Reagan in La Paz with an appeal for political dialogue and an end to "shows of force" in Central America. He said that traditional US-Mexican friendship would overcome "the many barriers" in relations. Earlier story, page 6

Guns charge

A man from the Irish Republic was charged in Le Havre, Normandy, with illegally transporting weapons and ammunition after the police had seized a lorry bound for Rosslare. Page 2

Tamil toll

The leader of the main Tamil political party in Sri Lanka said in Delhi that last month's anti-Tamil race riots probably claimed 2,000 lives on the islands. Tamils pray, page 3 Gandhi briefed, page 4

Gormley better

The condition of Lord Gormley, who suffered a stroke, is continuing to improve at Charing Cross Hospital, London. He even picked a horse race winner, a spokesman said.

Karachi riot

Police used tear gas in Karachi when a crowd of 20,000 people demonstrating against martial law under President Zia ul-Haq was attacked by his supporters. Page 4

Davey report

Attempts by the police in Coventry to restrain Mr James Davey while questioning him were responsible for his death, an independent report says. Page 3

Nato fears

The Mediterranean, once very much a Nato lake, is causing the allies concern as resources are stretched and Soviet naval power grows. Page 4

Pit pressure

The National Coal Board is renewing pressure for the closure of uneconomic pits after reporting an overall loss of £111m in the last financial year. Page 2

System X test

System X, the British-designed electronic digital telephone exchange, is competing for the £20m Hull City Council contract, which it must win to prove its viability. Page 13

Prost wins

Alain Prost, of France, in a turbo Renault, won the Austrian Grand Prix to lengthen his lead in the formula one motor racing championship. Page 18

Leader page 11

Letters: On the green belt, from Mr S. Chapman, MP, and Mr R. W. G. Smith; alternative medicine, from Dr R. D. Tonkin and others

Leading articles: Turkey's future: Soviet nationalism; Loch Ness monster threatening Nato; preserving cemeteries; Gerald Kaufman on Labour's leadership battle; Spectrum

Obituary, page 12

Li-Cot T. H. Newey, Rev T. P. Symonds

Home News	2-4	Events	24
Overseas	4-6	Law Report	12
Arts	12	Prize Bonds	24
Bridge	12	Science	12
Business	13, 14	Sport	18-20
Chess	2	TV & Radio	23
Crossword	12	Theatre, etc	23
Crusade	24	Weather	12
History	18	WHS	24

Lawson heads for cash struggle with Heseltine

By Philip Webster, Political Editor

Mr Nigel Lawson and Mr Michael Heseltine are heading for a confrontation over the rising level of defence spending.

Mr Lawson, the new Chancellor of the Exchequer, is authoritatively expected to question seriously in his first public spending review the necessity for Britain to extend its commitment to Nato's target of a 3 per cent per year growth in defence expenditure.

The commitment expires in 1985-86, but a decision on whether it should continue in 1986-87 will have to be taken soon. Mr Heseltine, the Secretary of State for Defence, is expected to seek the renewal of the commitment for that year and well beyond.

Mr Lawson, will argue that maintenance of the 3 per cent target will mean that defence would have to take more resources at the expense of areas like health and education.

Mr Heseltine, however, will put up a tough fight, boosted by his success, against Treasury opposition, in getting the Cabinet to back British technology with the £250m order for the new Air-Launched Anti-Royal Air Force rather than the American High Speed Anti-Radiation Missile (HARM), already in production.

Treasury officials have emphasized that the 3 per cent Nato figure is only a target which Britain has been more virtuous than other countries in meeting. Mr Lawson will point out that since the mid 1970s defence has gone ahead of health and education to become the second largest consumer of public money.

At present it is some £16,000m a year, compared with £35,000m on social security, £14,500m on health and £12,500m on education, and officials point out that factors such as the cost of maintaining a growing population of old people mean that defence spending cannot go on rising proportionately more than social spending.

Talks between Mr Peter Rees, Chief Secretary to the Treasury, and ministers about where savings are to be made have started and will continue through the autumn, leading to a statement in November.

MPs are looking forward to the likely clash between Mr Lawson and Mr Heseltine with keen interest. Mr Heseltine let his close colleagues know that he was furious last month at having to agree, the day after he published his defence White Paper, to a £240m spending cut as part of Mr Lawson's emergency £300m package of cuts. He was said then to have vowed not to let it happen again.

Mr Lawson, left, and Mr Heseltine.

Threats mar papal visit

From Roger Beardwood Paris

Stooping and looking tired, the Pope arrived five minutes late yesterday for the start of a two-day pastoral visit and pilgrimage to Lourdes, the centre of French devotion to the Virgin Mary and St Bernadette, who claimed to have seen her in a vision in 1858.

President Mitterrand was waiting at Tarbes airport, about eight miles from Lourdes, when the Pope's DC9 airliner touched down.

As the Pope left the aircraft, the band of the Garde Republicaine played the Vatican national anthem, followed by the "Marseillaise", Ecclesiastical dignitaries, Government ministers, members of the Senate and the National Assembly, and mayors were also at the airport.

In his welcome Mitterrand said he saluted in the papacy "an institution that has marked profoundly all of history," and particularly that of France. The Pope had made his own "the great causes of peace, solidarity and justice."

The Pope, in turn, said the French people - both Christian and non-Christian - stood for "liberty, equality and peace among all the world's peoples."

Children presented the Pope with bouquets of flowers in the papal colours of pale yellow and gold before he and Mitterrand left by helicopter for a one-hour private meeting at the prefecture of Tarbes, formerly an archbishop's palace.

Meanwhile, in Lourdes, crowds estimated at more than 700,000 had spent the day singing hymns and praying while they waited for the Pope's arrival. Many hundreds were on crutches or in wheelchairs, invalids who believe in the miracle-working properties of the Lourdes waters.

But the crowds, the religious fervour, and the flag-bedecked streets and banners failed to mask the tensions.

Up to 4,000 policemen, including paramilitary units, were on duty. Sharpshooters were on rooftops and special Council officials set up an all-night watch to monitor the slick which stretched from Southend to Shoeburyness. It was, they said, the most serious incident of its type for several years.

A Port of London Authority spokesman said it was believed to be fuel oil from the Shell and Mobil refineries on Canvey Island.

Temperatures continued to rise yesterday, reaching 82°F in London.

Golden moment: Cram wins the 1,500 metres, with his fellow-Briton, Overtt, in fourth place.

Cram wins gold on last day at Helsinki

By Our Sports Staff

The world athletics championships in Helsinki ended on a triumphant note for Britain yesterday when Steve Cram won the gold medal in the 1,500 metres. Cram, aged 22, took the lead with 200 metres to go and withstood the challenges of the American, Steve Scott, who was second, and of Said Aouita, of Morocco, who was third.

Fourth was Britain's other finalist, Steve Overtt, who lost his chance of a medal when boxed in at the start of the last lap.

Cram's victory completes his emergence from the shadow of Overtt, the world record holder, and Sebastian Coe, who was absent from the championships because of illness. Cram won the European and Commonwealth titles last year.

Britain also won two bronze medals yesterday. In the women's 200 metres Kathy Cook finished third behind Marita Koch, of East Germany, and the Jamaican, Marlene Ottey, and the relay team of Ainsley Bennett, Garry Cook, Todd Bennett and Philip Brown took third place in the men's 4 x 400 metres. Their success owed much to a spectacular fall by the American, Willie Smith.

For the second time in the championships Allan Wells, the British sprinter, failed by one place to win a medal. He finished fourth in the 100 metres and did so again in the 200, won by Calvin Smith, of the United States. The Republic of Ireland had a gold medal winner - their first for 27 years in a major championships - in Eamonn Coghlan in the 5,000 metres.

Mary Decker, of the United States, underlined her supremacy in women's middle distance running when she followed her win in the 3,000 metres by taking the 1,500 metres title. Australia's Robert de Castella won the marathon.

Frank Dick, Britain's national coach, yesterday rebutted stories that athletes were involved in obtaining proscribed drugs on mail order. Mr Dick said, "I know not of British athlete in track and field who is or has ever seriously contemplated being involved with these illegal substances."

Reports and results, page 18

Nkomo ends British exile today

By Rodney Cowton

Mr Joshua Nkomo, leader of the Opposition in Zimbabwe, is to fly back to Harare today after five months in exile in Britain.

The timing of his return will have been strongly influenced by a desire to defend his seat in the Zimbabwe House of Assembly, against a move due on Wednesday which would dispossess him of it.

In an official statement, made on his behalf Mr Nkomo, aged 66, said: "When I was forced by events to leave my country, I made it clear I was not leaving just for my own safety."

"I have made use of this enforced absence to work out ways of trying to achieve a solution to the problems of my country. I shall be attending the session of Parliament in Harare on Wednesday when I shall have more to say."

Mr Nkomo left Zimbabwe after a series of incidents in

Chad leader ready to defend south

Njamena (Reuters)

President Hissene Habre's Government seems ready to defend the north of Chad after the capture of Faya-Largeau by ex-President Goukouni Oueddine's forces last week, according to informed sources. It seems determined, however, to make a stand in the south.

France's senior presidential adviser on African affairs, M. Guy Penne, had talks yesterday with President Habre as French paratroopers were ordered to Salal, a military outpost 250 miles north of the capital, to train Chadian troops in the use of anti-aircraft and anti-tank weapons.

A first contingent of 150 paratroopers was dispatched on Saturday to Abéché, the main town in eastern Chad and one of Mr Habre's traditional strongholds. French troops are under orders not to engage in fighting.

The dispatch of French troops to Abéché and Salal appeared to confirm that Government forces were establishing a defence line from east to west.

Sources said that Mr Habre was bound to renew calls for France to provide air cover and send in combat troops in his meeting with M Penne, who arrived from Bangui in the neighbouring Central African Republic.

Mr Habre has claimed that Libyan aggression justifies French intervention. Last week he accused M Penne and other French officials of being members of a "Libyan lobby" seeking to avoid antagonizing Colonel Gaddafi.

PARIS: French support for Chad will develop according to circumstances and will be decided on solely by the Government. M Claude Cheyres, French Foreign Minister, said over the weekend (AFP reports).

M Cheyres who was speaking in Bargemon, southern France, confirmed that the French troops in Chad could defend themselves if attacked.

BRAZZAVILLE: Colonel Mengistu Haile Mariam, the Ethiopian leader and chairman of the Organization of African Unity, was to hold informal talks with other African leaders yesterday on events in Chad (AFP reports).

Leaders of 10 Central African states are in Brazzaville to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Congo's revolution.

Mr Nkomo in London yesterday.

which it was alleged that arms had been found in premises with which he was connected, and when he believed his life was threatened.

HARARE: The way to a return has been eased by a statement by Mr Robert Mugabe, the Prime Minister, on Friday that Mr Nkomo was unlikely to go to prison as a result of police investigations (Stephen Taylor writes).

Mr Mugabe said of currency and gem investigations in progress at the time Mr Nkomo left: "He might pay a little fine. But I think he has his own strategy. He is free to come back and we will not molest him unduly."

Date with defiance for Gdansk

From Roger Boyes Warsaw

Three years ago on August 14 Lech Walesa climbed into the Lenin shipyards in Gdansk to address a strike that was to trigger unrest throughout Poland and which eventually led to the birth of Solidarity.

Yesterday, with Solidarity almost buried, the Gdansk shipyard workers marked the anniversary with characteristic defiance. In the yards, a clandestinely printed leaflet called on the Polish authorities to start talks with Mr Walesa before August 22, otherwise Polish workers would stage a go-slow for 10 days.

Outside the yards 2,000 workers tried unsuccessfully to lay bunches of flowers at the foot of three crosses that commemorate workers shot during unrest in 1970 along the Baltic coast.

At least one person was killed in Iran, the state capital, when fighting broke out between supporters of President Shehu Shagari's National Party of Nigeria and those of the Unity Party of Nigeria, which rules the state. Paramilitary police used tear gas to disperse crowds.

Both sides alleged attempted ballot-rigging and intimidation of voters.

Reporters in Ibadan said several other bodies had been found and the official toll was expected to rise.

Newspapers reported that in Ilesha, another Oyo town, there was one death, with two in Ijebu-Ode, in neighbouring Ondo state, and two in the Maroko area of Lagos. Police confirmation was not available.

The remaining deaths were announced by Mr Uba Ahmed, NPN national secretary, who said six party members had been killed in the town of Abeokuta in western Ogun state, but did not make it clear when.

"Our followers have been subjected to all kinds of brutal killings and beatings. We have just lost six men in Abeokuta as of now," he told a news conference.

Houses and cars were also reported to have been burnt in some towns as large groups of vigilantes hunted for what they said was evidence of attempts to rig the elections.

12 die in Nigeria poll violence

Lagos (Reuters)

Twelve people were killed in western Nigeria during voting to elect state governors, according to reports here yesterday.

The violence was worse in the western state of Oyo, and marred a generally peaceful polling period that started on August 6 with the presidential election. Police imposed a dawn-to-dusk curfew there from last night.

At least one person was killed in Iran, the state capital, when fighting broke out between supporters of President Shehu Shagari's National Party of Nigeria and those of the Unity Party of Nigeria, which rules the state. Paramilitary police used tear gas to disperse crowds.

Both sides alleged attempted ballot-rigging and intimidation of voters.

Reporters in Ibadan said several other bodies had been found and the official toll was expected to rise.

Newspapers reported that in Ilesha, another Oyo town, there was one death, with two in Ijebu-Ode, in neighbouring Ondo state, and two in the Maroko area of Lagos. Police confirmation was not available.

The remaining deaths were announced by Mr Uba Ahmed, NPN national secretary, who said six party members had been killed in the town of Abeokuta in western Ogun state, but did not make it clear when.

"Our followers have been subjected to all kinds of brutal killings and beatings. We have just lost six men in Abeokuta as of now," he told a news conference.

Houses and cars were also reported to have been burnt in some towns as large groups of vigilantes hunted for what they said was evidence of attempts to rig the elections.

India's unique holiday concept. The Palace-on-Wheels. Brings back to life the vintage splendours of the age of Maharajas, Viceroys and Governors-General we thought had gone forever.

DON'T MISS THIS TRAIN AGAIN!

THE TRAIN - PURE VINTAGE
A collection of stately saloons impeccably restored to their former glory.

THE ITINERARY - PRINCELY TOURS OF RAJASTHAN & AGRA

Delhi Jaipur Udaipur Jaipur Delhi
Delhi Jaipur Agra Delhi

Among these saloons are the Maharaja State Coach, the oldest, built in 1892. The Maharaja of Jaipur State Coach with its famous ornamental ceiling and Durma Toad side panels. The Maharaja State Coach - the scene of many a royal marriage - complete with ornamental verandah. The pure white Viceregal Coach - used by the agent for the Governor-General for Rajasthan.

FACILITIES - WITH A TOUCH OF CLASS

Each saloon which accommodates no more than eight persons, has its own cushioned sleeping berths, lounge, bar, kitchenette and two toilets. The train itself includes a separate dining car, separate lounge, cum-observation car with a bar, children's corner, library, games table, deposit. Its own distinctive post mark and postal service and a sound system for announcements and music. What more can any gracious maharaja want?

THE PACKAGE - ALL INCLUSIVE

The cost of this incredibly nostalgic package includes travelling on the Palace-on-Wheels full meals on and off the train during the course of the tour, the itinerary - including entrance and guide fees to the monuments etc. - car and elephant and boat rides, sightseeing in luxury buses, cultural entertainment at selected points, visits to additional places of interest.

VINTAGE INDIA ALL THE WAY

AMERICAN EXPRESS TRAVEL DIVISION
60 Haymarket, London SW1Y 4BS
Tel: 01-493 3411

SPECIFIED HOLIDAYS
152 King Street, London WC2E 9JX
Telephone 01-731 6041

WINDS LTD
Winds House, Brookstone
Riverside, London E14 7JA
Telephone 01-493 2870
Cable: 01-204 2111
Fax: 01-493 2121
Manchester 01-627 0822
or contact your local Travel Agent

For the full story, in colour, visit us at
152 King Street, London WC2E 9JX
Dept. T, 28 March to 1 April, London W1
Tel: 01-731 6041

For general information on India contact India
Travel Office, 25 Abchurch Lane, London EC4N 3DF
Postal: 344 250

Industry on the alert for infiltrators

By Paul Routledge, Labour Editor

British industry is going on the alert for extreme left-wing trade union infiltrators after the unmasking of 13 alleged Trotskyist "moles" at BL's Cowley motor manufacturing plant.

Personnel managers are being advised to scrutinize very carefully the application forms of men and women seeking jobs, particularly if they subsequently show an interest in becoming shop stewards.

A spokesman for the Institute of Directors said yesterday that private sector companies were stepping up their monitoring systems in the wake of last week's dismissal of undercover militants by BL Cars.

"There is already a considerable amount of cooperation at personal director level on trouble-makers who would apply for jobs, not because they want a job but because they want to be placed in a position where they can cause industrial unrest", he said. "The events of last week will mean they are even more alert in the future."

The Confederation of British Industry is advising firms to use their "utmost vigilance" to combat "wildcat" strikes.

Mr Richard Price, the CBI's director of social affairs, speaking on the BBC Radio programme, The World This Week, yesterday urged employers to ensure that their employees were "on their side" in securing sensible industrial relations attitudes. It is understood that the Socialist League dismissed staff at Cowley belonging, said that the first responsibility for recruitment policy lay with the company.

"We expect them to join the union, and invariably they do", he said.

It was impossible for the union to identify "notorious troublemakers", he said. "We have to accept who they elected. This is democracy."

There is to be a local TGWU inquiry into the Cowley revelations but Mr Hawley ruled out a "witch-hunt".

Six of the 13 dismissed workers, including three women, have had their appeals rejected by the company. A similar fate appears to be in store for the remaining seven who appeal against dismissal today.

Leftist moles, page 2

Mr Hawley: "No union witch-hunt".

"moles" at Cowley were revealed to the management by fellow-workers.

On the same programme, Mr Grenville Hawley, national automotive group secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union to which the Police arm grip blamed for man's death in struggle with officers

By a Staff Reporter

Police attempts to restrain Mr James Davey during questioning were responsible for his death after a struggle at a Coventry police station, according to an independent report on the incident.

Dr Ernest Milford Ward, of Leicester, a retired pathologist, states that the arm grip officers used to overcome Mr Davey's struggles had been banned in the United States and should not have been used in Britain. But he also says that the police were "damned unlucky" that their actions ended in Mr Davey's death.

Mr Davey, aged 40, collapsed on March 11 when the police, who said they thought he was about to head-butt them, fell on him with one officer holding him round the throat. His heart stopped during the struggle, and he was taken to Coventry and Warwick Hospital where he was put on a life-support system, but doctors declared him clinically dead and the system was switched off after 11 days.

Mr Davey had been held in custody for 17 hours while the police tried to persuade him to go to London to answer questions about the shooting of Mr Patrick O'Nione outside a dockland wine bar.

Dr Milford Ward, who examined Mr Davey's body on April 17 and spoke to Coventry police about the struggle, said yesterday that Mr Davey had died because of the excited state he was in. "This chap was grossly over-excited, had been chain smoking and was in a highly volatile state."

Mr James Davey: 'Highly volatile'.

"When the struggle took place, a policeman grabbed him from behind, put his left arm around his neck with his left hand on his right shoulder. In order to restrain him, he pulled him back on his knee and Davey then fell forward. The policeman then fell on top of him.

"According to my information, he could have got brain damage from that injury because of the anoxia [lack of oxygen]. This grip has been banned by the American police because it is so dangerous, and it should be banned here."

A report on Mr Davey's death was compiled by Mr Charles Horan, Assistant Chief Constable (Crime) of Greater Manchester Police, and sent to the Director of Public Prosecutions, who is considering whether charges should be brought against police officers. Dr Milford Ward said he would not recommend such action.

"I think the police were damned unlucky. Unfortunately they started off a chain reaction by restricting blood to the brain, and after that, nothing was going to stop him dying," he said.

Dr Milford Ward said he was acting on behalf of Mr Davey's family, but was totally independent. "Everybody else ducked it because it was so controversial, people just did not want to get involved," he said.

The inquest on Mr Davey stands adjourned.

London Tamils pray for families in Sri Lanka

Tamils prayed and fasted at the Britannia Hindu Temple in Highgate Hill, north London, yesterday for the welfare of Tamils in Sri Lanka after the recent racial riots in the island. The half-day fast was also to raise money for the 130,000 refugees who fled their homes in the riots in which the official death toll is put at 350 and in which 20,000 Tamil businesses were attacked or destroyed (Nicholas Timmins writes).

The special ceremony was conducted by six priests with offerings of food, flowers and fire to the ancient Tamil warrior god Murugan. Hindu leaders among the Tamil community are writing to Mrs Indira Gandhi, the Indian Prime Minister, and to President Junius Jayewardene, calling for an end to the "genocide". There are an estimated 35,000 Tamils in Great Britain, concentrated in and around London, most of whom still have close family links with Sri Lanka. Many arrived in the 1960s and early 1970s after previous riots and after the introduction of regulations that would have compelled English speaking Tamils in the professions to learn Sinhalese in order to work.

In Britain, many have prospered. The temple is in the middle of a £200,000 conversion programme with money raised in the Tamil community. Originally a church, the building was for many years a synagogue until it was burnt out in the 1970s. With much of the local Jewish community having moved away, the building was taken over by the Tamils and decoration is to start soon (Photographs: Tony Weaver).

Leaders meet, page 4

Heatwave kills hundreds of birds

By a Staff Reporter

The hot weather has killed many water-based birds in several parts of Britain. The sun and the lack of rain have caused the spread of botulism, which attacks their nervous systems.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds said yesterday that it had been a very bad year for some birds. Last week more than 100 wildfowl at the Attenborough Nature Reserve, Nottingham, became the latest casualties of Britain's hottest summer since 1976.

Similar incidents have been reported by the Society in Norfolk and in Regent's Park, central London. On the boating lake in Regent's Park about 200 ducks and swans have died and in Norfolk about 130 birds, including gulls, mallards, geese and coots have perished.

Mr Tim Stowe of the society explained that botulism causes paralysis which affects the birds' wings, necks and legs and they waste away through their inability to feed and water.

He said that the affected birds are those which live in normally wet areas with fairly dense vegetation. They become breeding grounds for botulism when the water table is lowered.

The Thames estuary, Mersey estuary, Firth of Forth and parts of Norfolk, where shallow water can be found close to effluent pipes and rubbish tips, are bad areas for botulism.

While Britain's birdlife is suffering, the heat has proved a blessing to other wildlife.

The Royal Society for Nature Conservation notes that there have been far more butterflies than usual. Swarms of clouded yellows, painted ladies, red admirals, peacocks and tortoiseshells have been seen throughout the countryside.

Sea swimmers have been stung by Portuguese man o' war jellyfish, which have drifted into British waters.

Large numbers of shark have been seen off the Dorset and Devon coasts. A 24ft basking shark was seen in a Dorset bay.

One benefit of a hot summer is that many sub-tropical birds are attracted to British shores. For the first time in 40 years a block-winged stilt was spotted on a reserve in East Anglia.

Wild geese invading farms in search of food are damaging crops in East Anglia, according to the Country Landowners' Association.

Landowners in Norfolk say that geese have become "an absolute menace" to winter cereals, grass and vegetables. They are demanding a cull.

Boy, 9, has marrow transplant

A boy aged nine who has leukaemia was in a satisfactory condition in a London hospital yesterday after a seven-hour bone marrow transfusion.

Robert Allen received the marrow from the hip bone of his brother David, aged 16, in an operation on Saturday night at the Westminster Children's Hospital.

His parents travelled from the family home in Withybed Lane, Inkberrow, near Redditch, Hereford and Worcester, to be at his bedside.

The disease was diagnosed when Robert was 18 months old. He has twice undergone lengthy periods of drug treatment but each time suffered a relapse.

Doctors had said that his

Robert Allen with his brother David.

long-term chances of survival were low without the marrow transplant, which now gives him a 50 per cent chance.

The hospital said yesterday: "The operation went very smoothly and Robert is quite satisfactory. But it will be at least two weeks before we have any definite indication of whether the operation has been completely successful."

All members of the family underwent tests to see who would be most suitable for the transfusion.

TV-am viewers top million mark

Yesterday that the once yawning gap had now narrowed.

The BBC attributed TV-am's success to school holiday programming and to the extra time it has after nine o'clock. The BBC figures, a spokesman said, had not gone down as dramatically as TV-am's had gone up.

Nevertheless, TV-am has put on 700,000 viewers in a fortnight. Figures released by the Broadcasters' Audience Research Board for the week ended August 7 show that the TV-am audience was never less than 600,000 while on one occasion, 9am on Monday that week, the BBC had only 400,000.

Breakfast viewing figures, week ending August 7, broken down in 15-minute segments:

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
8am	1m	7m	1m	8m
8.15	1m	7m	1.1m	8m
8.30	1m	7m	1.1m	8m
8.45	1m	7m	1.1m	8m
9am	4m	1.1m	5m	1.4m

Survey scheme launched to help flat-buyers

By Baron Phillips, Property Correspondent

A new deal for flat buyers is launched today. It aims to give a prompt and economical survey of a flat and professional advice on its value.

The Flat Buyers' Report and Valuation Scheme is being established by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors. It follows the institution's House Buyers' Report and Valuation Scheme launched two years ago.

Under the new scheme, buyers will be able to receive an easily understood report on the state of repair of the flat and other parts of the building in which some owners may share responsibility for repairs.

The report will apply to both converted flats and those in purpose-built blocks. Apart from examining the roof of the building, where accessible, chartered surveyors will inspect

Animal gift by Herriot character

Miss Marjorie Warner, who became one of the writer James Herriot's favourite characters, left most of her £90,270 estate to Help The Aged and other charities for the old and needy.

Miss Warner, who was a model for his character Mrs Pumphrey, also left £500 each to the Blue Cross Animal Hospital and the Performing Animals Defence League.

Her Pekinese dog Tricky Woo also inspired a character in Mr Herriot's books, which were later made into the television series All Creatures Great And Small.

Miss Warner lived in Sowerby near Thirsk, North Yorkshire, where Mr Herriot was a veterinary surgeon for many years. Then she moved to Marine Parade, Saltburn, Cleveland, where she died in May, aged 86.

Her funeral in Sowerby was attended by Mr Herriot, Miss Warner, who enjoyed horseracing and had a 10p bet every day, also left £100 to the Injured Jockeys Fund.

Other Wills, page 12

Tapes held in search for wife

Detectives searching for Mrs Diane Jones are retaining some cassette tapes taken from her home in Essex. But Det Supt Michael Ainsley, who is leading the hunt, refused to say if the tapes had yielded any clues to her disappearance.

Officers have been monitoring more than 120 cassettes, most of them pre-recorded

Animal gift by Herriot character

Miss Marjorie Warner, who became one of the writer James Herriot's favourite characters, left most of her £90,270 estate to Help The Aged and other charities for the old and needy.

Miss Warner, who was a model for his character Mrs Pumphrey, also left £500 each to the Blue Cross Animal Hospital and the Performing Animals Defence League.

Her Pekinese dog Tricky Woo also inspired a character in Mr Herriot's books, which were later made into the television series All Creatures Great And Small.

Miss Warner lived in Sowerby near Thirsk, North Yorkshire, where Mr Herriot was a veterinary surgeon for many years. Then she moved to Marine Parade, Saltburn, Cleveland, where she died in May, aged 86.

Her funeral in Sowerby was attended by Mr Herriot, Miss Warner, who enjoyed horseracing and had a 10p bet every day, also left £100 to the Injured Jockeys Fund.

Other Wills, page 12

Tapes held in search for wife

Detectives searching for Mrs Diane Jones are retaining some cassette tapes taken from her home in Essex. But Det Supt Michael Ainsley, who is leading the hunt, refused to say if the tapes had yielded any clues to her disappearance.

Officers have been monitoring more than 120 cassettes, most of them pre-recorded

Animal gift by Herriot character

Miss Marjorie Warner, who became one of the writer James Herriot's favourite characters, left most of her £90,270 estate to Help The Aged and other charities for the old and needy.

Miss Warner, who was a model for his character Mrs Pumphrey, also left £500 each to the Blue Cross Animal Hospital and the Performing Animals Defence League.

Her Pekinese dog Tricky Woo also inspired a character in Mr Herriot's books, which were later made into the television series All Creatures Great And Small.

Miss Warner lived in Sowerby near Thirsk, North Yorkshire, where Mr Herriot was a veterinary surgeon for many years. Then she moved to Marine Parade, Saltburn, Cleveland, where she died in May, aged 86.

Her funeral in Sowerby was attended by Mr Herriot, Miss Warner, who enjoyed horseracing and had a 10p bet every day, also left £100 to the Injured Jockeys Fund.

Other Wills, page 12

18.00 HRS
31 AUGUST '83

ARE YOU WORKING TO MEET THIS DEADLINE?

IF YOU ARE APPLYING FOR AN INTERIM CABLE FRANCHISE - YOU CERTAINLY ARE.

GEC-Jerrold is the single most experienced source of network know-how and state-of-the-art equipment for cable operators.

GEC-Jerrold is the joint venture company formed by GEC-McMichael and Jerrold International of General Instrument to combine the best of British and US technology to help develop broadband communications systems in Britain and across the world.

GEC-Jerrold offers:

- Turnkey systems for all network topographies providing progressive enhancement for interactive facilities.
- The world's largest range of cable network equipment proven in service across the USA, Britain and Europe.
- Free technical advice on any aspect of the provision of cable systems.

GEC-Jerrold has a record that speaks for itself.

GEC-Jerrold is developing, by contract with British Telecom, the baseband switch for the BT advanced technology cable system.

GEC-Jerrold will have available a fully interactive mini-hub system by the time installations are being made.

GEC-Jerrold has a two-way addressable set-top converter 'Starcom V' with the features that operators want - programme security, parental locking and interactive subscriber participation for advanced future applications such as polling, mail order and electronic banking.

GEC-Jerrold - shouldn't they be helping you meet the deadline? Call the technical hot line - 0753 821673.

CALL THE TECHNICAL HOT LINE
0753-821673

GEC-Jerrold Limited, 642-543 Ajax Avenue, Slough SL1 4BG. Telephone: 0753 821671. Telex: 849212.

Death Row wife's appeal for life

By Richard Evans

A British woman sentenced to hang in South Africa for the murder of her husband will have her appeal against conviction and sentence heard tomorrow, when attempts will probably be made to introduce new evidence.

Maureen Smith, aged 39, will remain in her Death Row cell in Pretoria's maximum security jail while five Appeal Court judges consider her case in Bloemfontein, 250 miles away.

The hearing is expected to last two days and the result should be announced within a week. A British consular official is expected to attend the appeal.

Mrs Smith, born in east London, emigrated to South Africa in 1975 shortly after marrying her third husband, Mr Roger Smith, in Brentwood, Essex. Mr Smith, a quantity surveyor, was stabbed to death in the back garden of their Johannesburg home last July.

Mrs Smith was sentenced to death after the court was told that she and other members of her family had spent months plotting her husband's death because he refused to give her a divorce.

Mrs Smith's chauffeur, Jack Ramogale, and David Mnguni, who killed Mr Smith, were also sentenced to hang.

Ramogale, aged 25, was said to have been offered 500 rand (£275) by Mrs Smith to find a killer, and Mnguni, aged 35, was promised 10,000 rand (£5,500) for the killing. Their appeals against sentence will also be heard tomorrow.

Maureen Smith: New evidence.

Mrs Smith, who has spent 265 days in prison awaiting tomorrow's appeal, will be represented by Mr Douglas Shaw, QC, one of South Africa's leading lawyers. He is likely to seek leave to introduce new evidence from statements made in London by Mrs Smith's father, Mr Harry Mullucks.

It was alleged during the trial that Mr Mullucks, an East Ham insurance assessor, had suggested sending "heavies" from England to kill Mr Smith. Mr Mullucks, aged 71, has made sworn affidavits detailing his knowledge and involvement in events prior to Mr Smith's death.

If the court agrees to receive new evidence it will probably authorize a special hearing in London where Mr Mullucks would give evidence and face cross-examination. Mr Mullucks had wanted to fly to South Africa to give evidence at his daughter's trial, but he was refused immunity from possible prosecution.

Mr Mullucks said: "Maureen is bearing up and she is in a determined mood. I am praying and hoping the five judges of the Appeal Court extend to my daughter compassion and understanding."

"I believe her to be innocent and that she had no knowledge of what was to happen on the evening in question."

Mr Duncan Downes, a Durban-based solicitor, saw Mrs Smith on Friday. He said afterwards: "She is very anxious, very nervous and very concerned. Her thinking on all matters is not perfectly coherent. She has been under enormous strain, not only because of her sentence, but the strain of being where she is is enormous."

Mr Downes added that Mrs Smith's prospects in the appeal were "sound".

If Mrs Smith's appeal fails, a plea for clemency will be submitted to the state president. In theory, he alone would decide whether Mrs Smith should hang. But in practice the South African Cabinet would almost certainly make the final decision.

Astor in fight over sculptures

Sevenoaks District Council want Lord Astor to return 26 sculptures which it claims were removed without listed building consent from Hever Castle, his former home, at Edenbridge, Kent.

The sculptures were in Hever's Italian Gardens, which are included in the Department of the Environment's list of Grade 2 buildings of architectural and historical interest. They were sold at Sotheby's last month for £276,000. Lord Astor says they were his own personal property.

Architects earn 8.4% more

Architects' earnings in Britain increased in real terms in the year ended on April 1 by 8.4 per cent.

The Royal Institute of British Architects says average earnings of architects in full-time employment rose from £11,066 in 1982 to £12,000 in 1983. Principal architects' earnings went up by 6.4 per cent to £13,000, salaried architects by 8.9 per cent to £9,413 and local authority architects by 7.8 per cent to £12,338.

Crash landings at balloon event

Police and fire services were flooded with emergency calls yesterday as dozens of hot air balloons crash landed in Bristol, Avon, because of a lack of wind.

One balloon landed outside a local radio station, another outside the Mansion House. Yet another landed in front of clergy as they left Bristol Cathedral after the morning service. Fifty-six balloons were taking part in the annual Bristol Balloon Fiesta.

Detection and treatment of alcoholic doctors 'inadequate'

by Joanna Lyall

Procedures for identifying and treating doctors who are alcoholic, mentally ill or addicted to drugs are inadequate and represent only a "last ditch effort for a man who has gone overboard", according to a member of the General Medical Council's health committee.

"If the profession wishes to prevent disasters from occurring, clearly a means has to be found to deal with these problems earlier than we do at present", Dr Anthony Allibone says.

Commenting on the council's system for sick doctors in the Journal of the Society of Administrators of Family Practitioner Services, Dr Allibone, a general practitioner in Norfolk, says that the procedures help only "a tiny if tragic section of the profession". More local initiatives are needed for earlier detection of sickness among doctors, he says.

In August 1980 the GMC established a health committee and inaugurated a system designed to protect the public by providing early detection of sick doctors in a supportive rather than punitive atmosphere.

Previously doctors impaired by alcoholism, drug addiction or mental illness came to the council's attention only when they appeared before the disciplinary committee when they were liable to be suspended from practice or struck off the register.

The present system allows for sick doctors to have their fitness to practice assessed outside the disciplinary machinery of the GMC. Cases are considered by a "screener" who may ask the doctor to undergo a medical examination and then perhaps accept some limitations, such as not prescribing certain drugs or not working alone. If the examiner's recommendations are rejected, the doctor is referred to the health committee which can suspend him for a maximum of 12 months.

Started, 142 doctors have been referred to the GMC's screener. Of those, about half were invited to be examined.

Of those cases examined, 25 doctors were found fit to practise subject to certain limitations, 16 were found unfit to practise and two were fit to practise. Another five agreed voluntarily to refrain from practice.

By last October only 19 cases had been referred to the health committee and 12 doctors had been suspended because of impaired fitness.

Dr Allibone told The Times that although the procedure was working well it tackled only the tip of the problem. The cases being referred to the GMC were "of such severity as to restrict the possibility of a beneficial outcome".

Dr Allibone recommends the establishment of link doctors in all parts of the country to refer doctors to sources of help and also the extension of self-help groups similar to the British Doctors' Group. Established in 1973 along the lines of Alcoholics Anonymous, the group now has more than 200 members.

Suicide rates among doctors are three times that of the general population and women doctors' suicide rate is six times as high. Rates of mental illness are also three times that of the population as a whole.

Dr Max Glatt, a leading authority on alcoholism, calculates on the basis of deaths from arthritis that there are about 2,000 to 3,000 alcoholic doctors in the United Kingdom out of a total of 81,000.

In 1975 an independent committee of inquiry into the regulation of the medical profession, chaired by Sir Alec Morrison, received evidence of chronic alcoholic doctors who had been known as such for 20 years and more.

Professor Kenneth Rawnsley, president of the Royal College of Psychiatrists, who sat on the Morrison committee, said that sick doctors still represented a significant danger to patients.

Russians adamant over boy 'defector'

From Christopher Thomas Washington

The Soviet Embassy in Washington remained adamant over the weekend that it would not allow US officials to interview a Russian teenager who apparently wants to defect.

The diplomatic rumpus intensified rapidly as FBI and Secret Service agents positioned themselves ostentatiously outside the Soviet Embassy. Agents were also stationed outside a Russian residential compound in north-west Washington.

A collection of yellow brick buildings surrounded by a fence and controlled by an electronic gate.

As cars passed in and out agents looked into back seats and were particularly interested in unmarked vans with heavily tinted windows that frequently passed to and fro.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) ordered all airlines not to allow the boy on board. "We have taken every step that we can to prevent him surreptitiously leaving the country", it said.

Diplomatic tension was heightened when FBI agents approached the teenage son of a Soviet journalist at Dulles Airport Washington, believing that he might be Andrei Berezhkov, age 16 son of the first secretary at the Soviet Embassy.

Last Thursday the New York Times and the White House received a letter, purporting to be signed by the boy. The letter to the newspaper said: "I hate my country and its rules and I love your country".

According to the Russians, the agents who approached the Soviet journalist's son urged the boy not to leave. It was only when he convinced them that his only wish was to return to the Soviet Union that was permitted to proceed. The Soviet Embassy said a "provocation campaign" was being waged against Soviet representatives in Washington.

Later Mr Victor Isakov, a high-ranking Soviet Embassy official appeared on television and accused the Americans of a gross violation of international law, saying that such an attitude "could bring negative consequences for all the sides".

The Berezhkov family has been in Washington for the summer, and was due to be repatriated within a month. They have been living in a suburban block of flats in Maryland, but have not been home since the affair began.

Mediterranean forces stretched Anxiety grows in the allies' lake substantial increase in its naval presence. One analyst estimates the Soviet presence in 1964 at 5,000 ship-days, whereas in the mid-1970s during the period of tension around the Yom Kippur War this had increased to 20,000 ship-days a year.

In the first of a two-part series on Nato's responsibilities in the Mediterranean, RODNEY COWTON, Defence Correspondent, examines the balance of naval power.

NATO's SOUTHERN FLANK Part 1

The United States still puts on a show of strength from time to time with three or even four aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean, but much of the time there is only one carrier.

Nato's southern commanders miss few opportunities to complain about the inadequacy of British efforts in the western Mediterranean, and particularly at Gibraltar. The underlying thought is that so long as Spain's commitment to Nato remains hesitant, Britain should accept responsibility for the defence of the Gibraltar straits, and in the absence of a permanently assigned flotilla, the shore-based defences on Gibraltar need to be beefed up.

Although the British Government's public position is that it is satisfied with the forces assigned to Gibraltar, other British sources readily acknowledge that Britain is failing to achieve its Nato-force targets in that area.

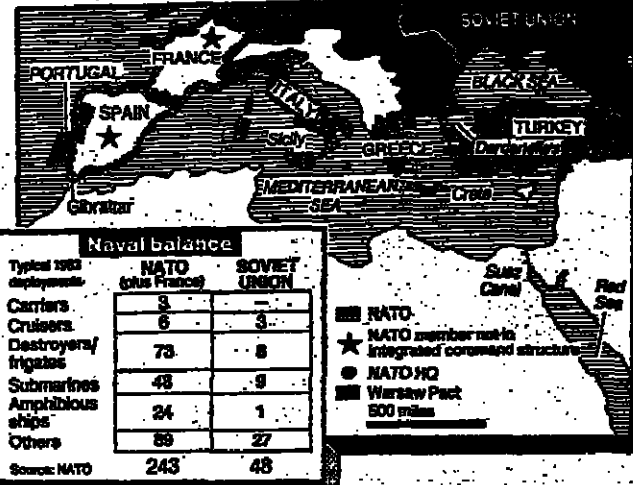

Much of the concern derives from the fact that the Mediterranean remains one of the world's key commercial arteries.

Because the Mediterranean is a relatively small, almost land-locked sea, it contains a large number of narrow passages which would be susceptible to blockading, and most of which would have to be kept open in times of war. These choke-points range from the Suez Canal in the east to Gibraltar in the west with midway, narrow waters around Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily and Malta.

But if these passages have to be kept open, there are others which the West would be desperate to close. These are the Bosphorus, the Dardanelles and the passages around Crete which are the successive gateways from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean. If ever the Soviet Union were to control these routes and be able easily to deploy its Black Sea fleet in the Mediterranean the whole balance of naval power could be radically affected.

It is here that the interface between naval and land power, and it is here that Nato's anxieties are greatest.

Tomorrow: Eliminating the imbalance.

But if these passages have to be kept open, there are others which the West would be desperate to close. These are the Bosphorus, the Dardanelles and the passages around Crete which are the successive gateways from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean. If ever the Soviet Union were to control these routes and be able easily to deploy its Black Sea fleet in the Mediterranean the whole balance of naval power could be radically affected.

It is here that the interface between naval and land power, and it is here that Nato's anxieties are greatest.

Tomorrow: Eliminating the imbalance.

Zia remains unmoved by hostile crowds

From Michael Hazlyn Rawalpindi

While 20,000 Pakistanis demonstrated yesterday against the martial law regime of President Zia ul-Haq, the President himself revealed a little more of his plans for the eventual restoration of democracy in an Independence Day press conference.

He declined to be specific in any way about his own future, which in itself was significant since there was a rumour that he would eventually return to barracks. This time all he would allow was that "personally I have no political designs".

Other demonstrators went on to towns across the country, but the Karachi one was the largest. Fighting broke out when pro-Zia demonstrators attacked the crowd, and police had to break it up with tear gas and a lathi charge.

Afterwards a number of arrests were made, including Mr Abid Zubair, the acting convenor of the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy.

In Murree Road, Rawalpindi, a vast procession of two-wheelers, the characteristic three-wheeled scooters of the subcontinent, hurried through the town flustering, bunting, Pakistani flags and pictures of General Zia and the great leader of Pakistan, Muhammad Ali Jinnah.

Lounging on every street corner, lathi dangles or rifles slung, were groups of shirt-sleeved police watching in case the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy tried anything.

Despite this and other evidence of popular support for the President's proposal for constitutional change, plans have been the subject of some thoughtful criticism.

Even the newspapers, which when it comes to criticism of the regime are usually tacitful to the point of subservience, have been expressing some doubts, while enthusiastically endorsing those aspects they like.

The Karachi morning paper Dawn, for example, suggests that strengthening the hand of the President so vehemently against the Prime Minister is not necessarily in the best interests of the country.

It also indicates that it would be much better if the constitutional changes were not simply imposed by President Zia, but discussed with the political parties and agreed upon first. The parties themselves have made it plain that they mostly disapprove of what the President is proposing.

All this was water off a duck's back as far as the President was concerned. He greeted independence day, the presidency here which looks as though it might have been built from icing sugar, with a flag-raising ceremony. A children's choir, rows of diplomats, senior civil servants and more major-generals than you could shake a swigger stick at grilled in the morning sun.

Later he said that he did not see the need to hold elections right away, knowing that his policies were popular with the mass of the people.

"This is not conjecture only", he insisted, "it is a reality. Realities need not always be put to the test".

It is plain, too, that President Zia does not relish the idea of elections. Discussing the need to reserve a number of seats in the assemblies for certain classes of people - scholars, doctors, farmers, technocrats and so on - he allowed that, despite all the restrictions on candidates' canvassing, "the basic element is based on bribery, their own individual affiliation, their own group, and their own sex".

Candidates in his elections will be rigorously scrutinized to make sure that the result, as he put it, "will be positive". He explained that, in order to be approved by the returning officer, a candidate will have a certain level of education and a certain age. In addition, "they must be fully and correctly following the basic principles of Islam, if they are Muslims", he said. "They must be patriotic national, if they are non-Muslim. They must have a clean past record. None of them must be convicted of a crime which can be considered as derogatory to one's character".

Woman 'hit by police' to get cash

From Our Correspondent Liverpool

Police are believed to have offered "substantial" compensation to a great grandmother who was allegedly beaten by a constable in March.

Mrs Harriet Mellor, aged 73, says she has accepted a four-figure out-of-court settlement from Merseyside Police after an officer allegedly smashed her front door, then punched and slapped her face before forcing her into a Panda car.

The officer was one of two who were looking for her daughter. Mrs Mellor says she was held in a police station for half an hour before being allowed hospital treatment for cuts bruises.

Mrs Mellor of Mason Street, Edge Hill, Liverpool, said yesterday that she was delighted that the matter had been resolved. "It was a terrifying ordeal and I am glad it is now all over. The money is some consolation, but it is not everything."

Solicitors acting for Mrs Mellor have filed a formal complaint against the two officers, both believed to be aged 22 and based at Wavertree Road police station, Liverpool. Merseyside Police said: "we are investigating a complaint against two police officers".

Hypnotized driver helps murder hunt

The examination under hypnosis of a lorry driver who may have seen Caroline Hogg being driven out of Scotland by her murderer was moderately successful, the police said yesterday.

Mr John Flinn, from Edinburgh, was returning from holiday when his car was almost involved in a collision with a pale blue Cortina five miles north of Coldstream on the A697 on the evening of July 8, an hour and a half after Caroline, aged five was last seen on The Promenade near her home in Portobello, Edinburgh.

Mr Flinn was hypnotized on Saturday under conditions laid down by the Crown Office.

Chief Inspector David Garbutt, of Lothian and Borders police, said yesterday that Mr Flinn had information about the Cortina.

The search for the killer has spread to Italy. Witnesses had spoken of a "foreign looking woman" taking films.

The names and addresses of a group of Italians who stayed in Edinburgh that night were obtained from a hotel register. The Italian police have traced the tourists and the murder squad is now waiting for seven cine films and one video film to arrive.

Unions court Mondale, the workers' friend

From Our Own Correspondent, Washington

The United States labour movement, after more than a decade of frustration in mainstream politics, looks set to throw its weight behind Mr Walter Mondale, the Democratic front-runner for the presidential nomination.

He has been assiduous in becoming a friend of labour and, in return, has been treated to much courting from the wealthy AFL-CIO, which has refurbished its political machinery in an attempt to recapture the old days of political influence.

Early in October, 3,000 delegates will gather in Florida to determine their presidential choice, and all six Democratic contenders await the outcome with great interest. The labour movement's other principal ally, Mr Alan Cranston, the Democratic presidential candidate from California, has opened an intensive drive to turn the tide against Mr Mondale but the odds are not with him.

The federation's conference was originally scheduled for December. Its shift to October gives a distinct advantage to Mr Mondale because it provides less time to his rivals to start campaigns in the unions.

It might have been brought forward even earlier, but October is chosen mainly out of deference to the Cranston camp, which said it needed more time to prove Mr Cranston's record as a friend of labour.

Mr Cranston acknowledged that the timing of the AFL-CIO conference was a boost to the Mondale campaign, but neither he nor Senator John Glenn, another leading contender, has any inclination to respond with anti-union campaigns.

Mr Mondale enjoys AFL-CIO backing.

Moi assures Asians of a place in Kenya

From Charles Harrison, Nairobi

President Moi assured Asians and other minorities yesterday that Kenya would remain a plural society. He called on the country's large Asian business community to ignore "prophecies of doom" which discouraged investment by suggesting that Kenya was politically unstable or economically mismanaged.

More than 1,000 Asians, including many prominent business and professional men and women, called on President Moi at his home at Kabarak, 200 miles north-west of here, to declare their loyalty and their support for his policies. He presented membership certificates for the ruling Kenya African National Union to 900 of them.

There are about 80,000 Asians in Kenya. The community has played a leading role in business, industry and commerce, as well as in the professions. Its confidence suffered when many Asian businesses and homes were looted during last year's attempted coup, but much of the lost confidence has returned with Kenya's quick recovery.

Yesterday's demonstration was by the largest group yet to call on President Moi at his home.

Big Apple gets back its shine

From Trevor Fishlock New York

Manhattan was fully dressed in its Suit of Lights again last night as power was restored after a three-day black-out that hit hundreds of businesses.

There was cheering in the mid-town fashion houses which had been plunged into darkness at the height of one of the New York clothing industry's busiest marketing weeks.

With hundreds of buyers in town to see the autumn and spring fashions, the garment industry has been working feverishly in borrowed or emergency-lit accommodation.

With lost time and millions of lost dollars to catch up on, garment manufacturers predicted that today would be a "mad house".

New York is in a euphoric mood of self-congratulation for having come through a black-out which threatened the city's jugular, its commerce.

No space for a million dollars

Mrs Sally Ride, America's first woman astronaut, who has turned down offers worth a total of more than $1m (£670,000) to cash in on her fame (Ivor Davis writes).

On a visit to Las Vegas, Mrs Ride, aged 32, who was one of the five crew of the space shuttle Challenger on its recent flight, said:

"There have been a lot of stories published about how I could make a million dollars with endorsements and other things. But I have said no. I don't want to get out of the Challenger programme and cash in on my name. I didn't go into the space programme to make money or be famous - I went into it to get into space."

Zimbabwe pays tribute to nationalist war dead

From Stephen Taylor, Harare

At Heroes' Day memorial services this weekend, Zimbabwe honoured nationalists who died in the independence struggle. Ceremonies were held across the country over the four-day holiday period, designated to replace the colonial Rhodes and Founders' days.

In a service at Heroes' Acre, a shrine built by North Korean craftsmen on the outskirts of Harare, President Canaan Banana called on the victors and vanquished of the war to unite in making Zimbabwe a shining example of racial harmony.

Television and radio specials paid tribute to nationalist leaders buried at Heroes' Acre, including Herbert Chitepo, who was assassinated in Zambia in 1975, and Josiah Tongogara, the guerrilla commander once suspected of engineering the assassination, who was killed in a car accident at the end of the war.

The ceremonies and media coverage were illustrative of changing perspectives here in what makes a hero. Before independence Rhodesian war dead were honoured on Remembrance Day and their antagonists were reviled as terrorists.

Ousted queen thwarted

Mbabwe (Reuter) - The deposed Queen Regent of Swaziland has failed in an attempt to rally public support against her dismissal from office in a palace coup, informed sources said yesterday.

A meeting of national leaders called by Queen Dzeliwe's main backer, Prince Gbabezi Dlamini, at the traditional capital of Lobamba had not taken place as planned. The gathering had been declared illegal by Prince Bhekisipi Dlamini, the Prime Minister.

Prince Gbabezi wanted the meeting to challenge what he had termed Queen Dzeliwe's unconstitutional removal last Wednesday.

Queen Regent Dzeliwe, the "Great She-Phant", was replaced by Inkhosikati (royal wife) Ntombi, whose teenage son was named the future king.

Trudeau seeks new image

From John Best Ottawa

The extensive Cabinet reshuffle by Mr Pierre Trudeau, the Prime Minister, at the weekend is regarded as an effort to give his Liberal government a fresh image before Canada's general election, expected next year.

Five Ministers, including Mr Gilles Lamontagne, Defence, were dropped while five backbenchers were elevated to Cabinet jobs.

Eight Ministers switched posts in the reshuffle, the third carried out by Mr Trudeau in less than a year.

Mr Jean-Luc Pepin, one of the most senior members, was moved from the demanding Transport portfolio to the relatively obscure post of Minister of State for External Relations.

Mr Pepin will be replaced by Mr Lloyd Axworthy, Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr Lamontagne, a former Mayor of Quebec, will be replaced by Mr Jean-Jacques Blais, until now Minister of Supply and Services.

Trudeau has pledged to step down before the next election, but has kept everyone guessing about the date of his retirement, while his potential heirs and the Liberal Party machine wait.

The new Cabinet is: Prime Minister: Pierre Trudeau; Secretary of State for External Affairs: Allan Rock; Secretary of State for Canada: Serge Joyal; Defence: Jean-Jacques Blais; Finance: Marc Lalonde; Environment: Charles Caccia; Energy: Jean Chretien; Transport: Lloyd Axworthy; Communications: Francis Fox; Industry: Ed Leamy; Agriculture: Eugene Whelan; Fisheries: Pierre de Borne; Justice: Mark MacGuigan; Solicitor-General: Robert Kaplan.

Labour: Andre Gagnon; Employment and Immigration: John Roberts; Health and Welfare: Maurice Beaudet; Public Works and Housing: Ronald Laidlaw; Indian Affairs and Northern Development: John Murray; Treasury Board: Herb Gray; National Revenue: Pierre Bouchet; Supply and Services: Charles Lapointe; President of Privy Council: Yvon Pinard; Senator: Horace Andrew Chern; Consumer Affairs and Women: Judy Erol; Veterans Affairs: Bennett Campbell.

Mr Trudeau: Dismissed five ministers.

Sri Lanka Tamil leader briefs Mrs Gandhi

Dehi (AFP) - Mr Appapillai Amirthalingam, the Sri Lankan Tamil leader, yesterday met Mrs Indira Gandhi, the Indian Prime Minister, who has offered to mediate in the island state's bitter ethnic dispute.

No details of the talks here were given, and Mr Amirthalingam, who is secretary-general of the Tamil United Liberation Front (TULF), the island's principal opposition party now facing a constitutional ban, was to meet Mrs Gandhi again tomorrow.

Observers expected him to come under pressure during the talks to soften the Tamils' separatist demands.

Mr Amirthalingam had changed plans yesterday and flown to Delhi to meet Mrs Gandhi. He was to have talks with local Tamil leaders in Madras, the capital of Tamil Nadu state, the heartland of the Indian Tamils.

Mrs Gandhi was accompanied at yesterday talks by the Indian Foreign Minister.

Mr Gandhi has offered to act as mediator in finding a solution to the troubles in Sri Lanka after ethnic riots last month in which 371 people were officially estimated to have died, with another 100,000 people left homeless. Most of the victims were Tamils.

Mr Amirthalingam has been under pressure from hardcore party elements to boycott talks proposed by the Sri Lankan Government. However, he said yesterday that the "picture has changed somewhat" with the Indian offer of mediation.

COLOMBO - The Government has relaxed a night curfew imposed after recent race riots in the town of Kandy to allow its famous annual pageant to start on schedule last night (Reuter reports).

سكزامن الاصل

Irish priest held in riots as Chile protesters try to bury their dead

Santiago (AP, AFP) - A Roman Catholic priest from Ireland was arrested along with at least 20 mourners as disorders erupted at funeral services here for two of the 24 people killed during anti-government demonstrations. At least five funeral processions turned into protest marches.

Missionaries, said he was arrested while walking home from a cemetery, and then beaten and kicked for an hour on a police bus and in a police station. He said he was released late on Saturday without being charged.

He said that "professional provocateurs" were responsible for the disorders, but did not describe the circumstances of the victims' death.

Mexico and US in search for stability

From John Carlin, La Paz, Mexico

President Reagan arrived yesterday in the town of La Paz at the southern tip of the Mexican peninsula of Baja California for a day of talks with President Miguel de la Madrid. Central America was expected to be the chief issue under discussion at the summit, the first between the neighbouring Presidents.

Governments on how to defuse them remain marked. President de la Madrid said in an interview on American television on Thursday that the presence of American warships off Central American coasts would put an obstacle in the way of peace efforts in the region, particularly attempts to avoid war between left-wing Nicaragua and US-backed Honduras.

Plane given to Belize

Britain has given Belize, its former Central American colony, two Defender Islander aircraft to strengthen its defences, according to a statement from Belmopan (Reuters reports).

"We agree to disagree" on foreign policy is always the line of the American Embassy in Mexico City. There was little reason to believe that there would be any unaccustomed friction between the two Presidents, or between Mr George Shultz, US Secretary of State and Mexico's Foreign Minister, Sr Bernardo Sepúlveda, who were also present.

Members of the Defence Force are being trained in Canada to fly and maintain the aircraft, which are to be used mainly for transport, reconnaissance and rescue operations.

There has been much speculation in Washington and Mexico City that President Reagan planned to use the meeting to put pressure on Mexico to toe the more belligerent American line on Central America, instead of pursuing a policy of negotiation with all parties, the Sandinistas in Nicaragua included.

Ankara inquiry on politicians' leak to 'Times'

Ankara (Reuters) - Military officials are investigating how a protest published in The Times from 16 detained Turkish politicians left the military base where they are being held, sources close to the detainees said at the weekend.

UN race conference heeds West's views

From Alan McGregor, Geneva

An action programme for the second decade against racism is to follow the present decade which ends in December - was adopted here at the weekend, amid some controversy, by the 10-day second United Nations world conference on racism and racial discrimination.

Several paragraphs were voted on separately by the 126 nations represented so that Western countries could register their reservations on the call for intensified measures to isolate South Africa, including termination of business contacts and an embargo on the supply of strategic commodities, especially oil.

Pilgrim's homage: The Pope praying in front of the Virgin's statue inside the Sacred Grotto in Lourdes.

Threats strain Pope's Lourdes visit

Continued from page 1 units kept the crowds under surveillance with sophisticated television and infrared cameras.

Hours before the Pope's arrival, police closed all roads into the town. Detectives, detained for questioning a dozen Basque nationalists on the French side of the border with Spain.

In Toulouse, 90 miles from Lourdes, an incendiary bomb badly damaged the offices of a Catholic newspaper, La Croix du Midi, yesterday morning. A handwritten message stuck to the window of another religious publishing house said: "Tomorrow the Pope." Police questioned members of an anarchist group.

On Friday, an explosion wrecked the first Station of the Cross - the basilica in Lourdes.

Security around Beirut deteriorates

From Robert Fisk, Beirut

men of the 3rd, 4th and 8th Brigades with tanks and armoured personnel carriers into the Chouf, and expects that troops of the multinational force in Beirut will patrol the international highway between Beirut and the mountain town of Bhandoun and the coastal highway from Beirut to the Awali river.

Senior Lebanese officers in Beirut say that the Israelis have now withdrawn all their logistic and support units from the Chouf in preparation for departure.

The Lebanese Army has been told that the Israelis cannot guarantee their presence in the Chouf after August 20, although this is not in itself a departure date.

On Wednesday and Thursday two Lebanese soldiers at the village were killed and six others wounded.

Hot-line at hospital for amnesia victim

The Emmanuel Hospital in Portland, Oregon, has set up a 24-hour hot-line to receive calls from anybody who thinks he recognizes the Englishman who has lost his memory after a road accident.

Soviet paper takes dim view of shortage

Moscow (Reuters) - A quarter of a million people in Moscow have been waiting months for spectacles because lenses are in short supply, Izvestia reported yesterday.

Israel makes new friend in black Africa

Encouraged by a military deal of so far undisclosed proportions, Liberia has become the second of more than 20 black African states which broke off diplomatic ties with Israel in protest against the 1973 Middle East war, to agree to return its Ambassador to Tel Aviv.

The decision was announced dramatically in the Liberian capital of Monrovia on Saturday when the state-controlled radio was interrupted for a special broadcast. Senior Israeli officials are now confident that the recent Libyan-inspired coup in Upper Volta and the continued Libyan-backed revolt in Chad.

Cosmonaut warning averts flood disaster

Moscow (AFP) - The two Soviet cosmonauts, Commander Vladimir Lishtov and Alexander Alexandrov, who have been 47 days in their orbiting space station, have saved part of Soviet Central Asia from serious flooding by warning the flight command centre, Moscow radio reported yesterday. They spotted a lake 12,000 ft up in an inaccessible part of Tajikistan, and geologists who inspected the area said it had been formed after a thaw and was threatening to flood several towns, later evacuated. A channel was dug to divert the water.

Spain agrees to fishing cuts

Rabat (Reuters) - Spain and Morocco have finalised a fishing agreement after seven months of tough negotiations which will force Spain to scrap part of its 1,200-strong fleet operating off Morocco, informed Spanish sources said.

Four climbers die in Alps

Sion (AP) - Four climbers died in weekend accidents in the Swiss Alps, bringing the season's toll to 22. Two men climbing the Matterhorn's north face fell hundreds of feet on to a glacier.

'Reign of fear' in Philippines

Manila (Reuters) - The Archbishop of Manila, Cardinal Jaime Sin, said yesterday an atmosphere of fear and anguish prevailed in the Philippines because of social injustice and rampant violation of human rights.

Flood rescue

Delhi (Reuters) - The Indian Army has been called in to help rescue thousands of people marooned by the flooding of the Godavari River in Maharashtra and Andhra Pradesh, where at least 70 people have drowned or been killed by collapsing houses.

Tanker sunk

Cape Town (Reuters) - The oil-laden bow section of the burnt-out Spanish supertanker Castillo de Bellver sunk in the Atlantic 150 miles off the South African coast on Saturday after experts blew two holes in its side.

Blaze beaten

Dar es Salaam (Reuters) - A forest fire, which threatened thousands of wild animals living on the slopes of the 19,340ft Mount Kilimanjaro, has been extinguished after a week-long struggle by Tanzanian firemen, soldiers and civilians.

Peking appeal

Peking (Reuters) - The Government has called on foreign scientists of Chinese descent to return to their motherland by coming to China and helping to develop their motherland, the New China news agency said.

Pilgrims killed

Delhi (AFP) - Up to 60 pilgrims died in a stampede as Hindu shrine in the north Indian state of Himachal Pradesh when a building belonging to a temple priest collapsed during a fair.

Clemency plea

Bangkok - A former student activist, Chirawat Kienpanya, aged 25, who is awaiting execution for killing a policeman, will ask King Bhumibol for clemency. His family has already lodged a similar appeal.

Typhoon threat

Tokyo (Reuters) - High waves pounded Japan's Pacific coast and torrential rains lashed southern regions yesterday as two typhoons moved closer. Six swimmers were drowned in rough seas.

Baltic barrier

Moscow (Reuters) - The Soviet Union has started to build a 15-mile barrier across the Bay of Finland to protect Leningrad from flooding during high tides in the Baltic, Sovetskaya Rossiya reported.

Basque blast

Usurbil (Reuters) - Two separatist guerrillas died when their car blew up outside a factory in this Basque town, police said. They belonged to an anarchist offshoot of ETA.

The world chess fracas

Kasparov the superstar likely to keep his nerve

From Richard Owen, Moscow

The latest fracas between Moscow and the International Chess Federation (Fide) could lead to the collapse of the current world championship and even threaten the structure of world chess, according to Soviet chess experts.

and Fide declared Korchnoi the winner at Pasadena by default. Kasparov clearly regrets having to abandon the competition only two steps away from the chance to win the world title at the age of 20. Kasparov was 25 when he became world champion. But Kasparov has publicly supported the Soviet decision to withdraw, with the proviso that he hopes the match against Korchnoi can be rescheduled.

From the seclusion of his home in Baku, Azerbaijan, in the south of the Soviet Union, Kasparov said that the match should have taken place in Rotterdam, and that Fide had not heeded the wishes of the participants. Since that is the Soviet line it is difficult for Kasparov to say anything else, but he - and the Soviet Chess Federation - have their eye on the next Fide congress in October, which they say they hope will reverse the decision.

quickly understood that chess was very easy and just what I needed", he recalled in an interview.

Less but well built, with dark good looks, Kasparov is a superstar in a country where chess is a national preoccupation. He is well aware of his brilliance, but has a natural, unassuming and rather ironic manner.

He lives quietly at home with his mother - to whom he is devoted - and prefers to play football or read books in English rather than engage in politics. If he became world champion Kasparov would probably not be the party line and act as a spokesman for Soviet peace policies as willingly as Kasparov does.

Chess experts doubt, however, that Kasparov might have been tempted to follow the example of Korchnoi, who defected from Russia in 1976. Some sources think it likely that the Soviet authorities simply want to ensure that Kasparov waits a year or two before being given the chance to depose Karpov.

Kasparov himself certainly believes the current crisis must be resolved. If it is not, the Soviet Union could declare the current championship invalid and withdraw altogether. Equally, Karpov could remain champion while refusing to meet contenders acknowledged as legitimate by Fide.

If after October the Soviet Union were to form its own "world federation" controlled by the Soviet block and the Third World - as some think it might - Kasparov could lose the chance of becoming a true world champion and would have to settle for winning a Soviet-dominated event.

Garry Kasparov: Unassuming superstar of chess.

صباحنا الاصل

Television Wall of sound

Those under 40 can hardly have forgotten the "Spector sound"...

Spector was a record producer who worked in the studio. The artists were interchangeable...

No one seemed to like him very much. "If there is such a thing as a bad guy," one songwriter said...

It was good to know, from the credits, that The Charterhouse of Parma (Channel 4) is based upon Stendhal's novel...

Peter Ackroyd

Catherine Cookson country is off the branch line from Newcastle to Hexham...

Seven years ago, when Catherine was 70, the Cooksons moved back to the countryside of her childhood...

She leads the way. Small in appearance from the outside, the house opens on to a series of vast rooms...

Catherine Cookson's sixtieth novel, Hamilton, is published today. It is quite unlike the great melodramatic family sagas...

The devotion of a public now in some 30 countries - Holland in particular, she says - is "saturated with

Catherine Cookson has risen above adversity to a seemingly permanent place in the best-seller lists: her sixtieth novel, Hamilton, is published today. Interview by Caroline Moorehead

Returning to first principles

Photograph of Catherine Cookson by Alan Gorngrah

Cookson - inevitably dominates her life. She treats the 3,000 letters she receives each year very seriously...

northern voice, occasionally using the Northumberland idiom of her childhood and her heroines: "Me da" (my father)...

Doek, her illegitimacy, her mother's alcoholism and her 12 years in the laundries of various workhouses...

"I now look back on the years between 40 and 50 as a painful nightmare," she wrote in her autobiography, Our Kate...

She took 12 years to write Our Kate, which turned out in the end to be more about her mother than herself...

Her words suggest complacency. But Catherine Cookson is a dogged researcher and her novels are dense in historical detail...

"When Tom's school was evacuated to St Albans during the war we had a little flat opposite the library. I took a book every day: Chaucer, Emerson, John Donne, Good plain writing, no hyperbole...

There are ten unpublished novels - "they didn't pass Tom's eye" - and five more ready in her study...

Paolo Bocelli and Tania Rocchetta as the Macbeths

Theatre Stab in the back

Macbeth Riverside

The Compagnia del Collettivo from Parma arrives at the London International Festival of Theatre (LIFT '83) with a great deal of hype...

They use as much or as little of the text (in Italian) as they need to get to the heart of the play and present it in whatever mixture of modern styles seems apt...

How interesting is it as a theatrical spectacle? Sometimes pretty good. How much does it have to say about Shakespeare's Macbeth (which is not the point anyhow)?

Lady Macbeth dies in Pirandellian style by throwing off her costume and marching off the set in ordinary clothes...

play's synopsis in which the Witches salute Macbeth thrice merely from inability to get it right first time...

Along with all this goes an interesting portrayal of the Macbeths themselves as young parvenus lounging in front of a trendy little portable telly with a pile of paperbacks...

The evening opens with a family bored reading of the

Anthony Masters

Promenade Concerts

BBCSO/Pritchard Albert Hall/Radio 3

Mahler's "most perfect work" and "his supreme masterpiece" (two recent comments by Mahler scholars on Das Lied von der Erde) is peculiarly satisfying to hear at a Prom...

On this occasion it was the vividly detailed orchestral writing that fired the imagination: the eerie, twisted pairs of wind instruments warbling sounds of nature; a superlative first oboe (John Anderson) unravelling the uncertain skein of melody in the second section of "Der Abschied"...

William Lewis - a late replacement for Hermann Winkler - tackled bravely the Schindler's list of the first song, but, admirably, he preferred to retain a fine tone and to be occasionally drowned...

singing, but, in the words of the last song, her voice was veiled - a cloudy, vibrant tone obscured the simple purity of Mahler's melodies, and she allowed her voice to flower in generous, wide crescendos at the tops of phrases.

Nicholas Kenyon

ASMF/Marriner Albert Hall/Radio 3

What is one to say of a work by Peter Maxwell Davies that shatters no idols, does not rant and rail against the world, and has no deadly issues of power, corruption or survival to unfold? His Sinfonia Concertante for five solo wind, timpani and strings, which received its first performance at Friday night's Prom (after the intended premiere in America during the recent Britain Salutes New York Festival was cancelled), is a cool, collected essay: complex and restless on the surface as any work of Davies's has to be, but underneath breathing an extraordinary, untypical repose of spirit which suggests that the composer has perhaps found a (temporary?) musical equilibrium.

Which is not to imply that there are no risks taken in this intricately absorbing half-hour piece: a full six minutes of a 13-minute opening movement to a slow introduction is bold indeed: solo flute and oboe gently lay out the minor-thirds over the timpani's F that will provide the tonal argument of the piece, but it is not until an accelerating whips into an almost brazenly Mozartian horn theme over pizzicato strings that the music's impetus is felt. On Friday the long melodic transformations for the wind did not quite stand out clearly enough; but the musical argument, as in Davies's Second Symphony, is scrupulously organized, and the clarity is increased here by the absence of any flamboyant orchestral effects.

The end of this first movement evaporates exquisitely into what turns out to be the material of the second, where the minor thirds drift airily, like a half-heard echo of Davies's Orkney music: from an F minor-ish third emerges a long, low C on flute and oboe, an alternative point of response to the F - which then, however, the timpani raps home, drawing the wind soloists in the final bars to an unexpectedly sharp unanimity of chording.

Solo flute tries to recapture the mood of lassitude, pondering the F minor-F major thirds, but the timpani brilliantly begins a dancing finale which brings in all the wind soloists - horn burbling, flute scattering, and then oboe eloquently singing the phrase that began the work. Suddenly everything collapses on to the low, quiet C again, but the coda, with its long racing string scales and ringing, peeling woodwind cadenzas, sweeps all doubt away - but leaves behind an unearthy, fading echo.

In a mainly confident first performance, strongly directed by Neville Marriner, Antony Pay (clarinet) stood out among the excellent soloists for his ability to find the meaning as well as the notes; Tristan Fry's timpani playing was equally vivid. A word, too, for Anthony Rolfe Johnson's earlier account of Britten's Les Illuminations.

Nicholas Kenyon

Rostropovich Festival Buoyant showman

The first Rostropovich Festival has happened at Snape: and with it, at its heart on Saturday night, the apotheosis of the inevitable Slava-and-friends concept in a programme of "Paintings and Music". There they all were: Prokofiev, Akhmatova, Shostakovich, Tsvetayeva, Stravinsky - for the eye in the canvases of fellow expatriot, Gabriel Glikman, starting in the raw, sculpted distillation of character, and for the ear in the musical tributes of Rostropovich and his wife, all curves, fullness and substantiation.

The pictures, well hung in the unyielding proportions of the Maltings recital room, were spirited via slide and screen into the concert hall, where to the accompaniment of Rostropovich's buoyant verbal showmanship they spoke their own silent subject. In Glikman's own work (think of Chagall, Kandinsky, the cubist Picasso) there is a volatile movement between darlings of colour and laconic wit and blocks of numb stasis drained of colour - and so it was in the recital.

There was Stravinsky, bony, triangular, sitting like a blue Gandhi ("when he smiled he was like an evil old lady"), with the droll scepticism of his 1937 "Russian Song" played with nicely mocking restraint by Rostropovich and Roger Vignoles. There were, on the other hand, the blue hope-drained eyes of Shostakovich: all angles of dry white lines biting on coarse, coarse or hardboard ("his life was angular, chased from one corner to another"), and there was his "Tears for a Dead Child", its question and answer Jewish folksong shared between Jane Mackenzie's dramatic and ever more vibrant soprano and Marcia Swanston's distinctive smoky mezzo.

Marina Tsvetayeva was remembered by Galina Vishnevskaya in a spare, word-parsing performance of Shostakovich's "Hamlet's Dialogue with his Conscience", while portraits of Alexander Blok and Anna Akhmatova, both pierced by the red, beyond of revolution, had their counterparts in Shostakovich and Prokofiev settings. Prokofiev alone remained with the eyes of a child: past the luscious wit, the biting repartee, Glikman and Rostropovich saw the still blue eyes and full red lips of fairytale, and the C major wonder of the Adagio from Cinderella.

Hilary Finch

His Holiness Maharishi Mahesh Yogi Founder of the Science of Creative Intelligence and the Technology of the Unified Field (1971-1982); Founder of Mahanishi European Research University, Switzerland (1975) and Germany (1982); Founder of Mahanishi University of Natural Law, England (1982); Founder of Mahanishi International University, United States (1971); Founder of Mahanishi Academy of Vedic Science, India (1980); and Founder of the World Government of the Age of Enlightenment (1976).

The World Government of the Age of Enlightenment, a non-political, non-religious, global organization with the participation of the peoples of more than one hundred countries, does not do any of the functions of existing governments, nor does it replace them in any way.

The World Government of the Age of Enlightenment enjoys sovereignty in the domain of consciousness, authority in the invincible power of natural law, and activity in the eternally dynamic silence of the unified field of all the forces of nature from where the infinite diversity of the universe is perfectly governed without a problem.

The practical knowledge is the basis of the World Government's invitation to all governments to rise to a new level of governing without problems.

The Mahanishi Technology of the Unified Field, applied to daily living, will enlighten the evolutionary power of natural law to uphold life in all positive values - the individual will enjoy freedom from problems and suffering; every nation will enjoy integrated national consciousness, cultural integrity, self-sufficiency, and invincibility; and the whole family of nations will enjoy permanent world peace.

GOVERNMENTS INVITED TO SOLVE THEIR PROBLEMS

THE WORLD GOVERNMENT OF THE AGE OF ENLIGHTENMENT ANNOUNCES its readiness to solve the problems of any government regardless of the magnitude and nature of the problem - political, economic, social, or religious; and irrespective of its system - capitalism, communism, socialism, democracy, or dictatorship.

Governments are invited to contract with the World Government of the Age of Enlightenment to solve their problems on the basis of cost reimbursement after the target is reached.

1983 can be the year of fulfilment for every government.

- * Complete confidentiality is assured.
* Consultations, discussions, deputations, and feasibility studies may not be necessary because every government already knows what must be achieved, and the World Government has already developed techniques to fulfil any requirement.
* The government will set the target, specify the stages, and determine the criteria of success at each stage.
* The World Government of the Age of Enlightenment will design the project accordingly and implement it.
* The first step will be a letter of intention from the government to the Minister of Education, World Government of the Age of Enlightenment, Seelisberg, Switzerland.
* The contract will be drawn up by a mutually acceptable international law firm in conjunction with an international bank.

It is hoped that every government takes this announcement in the same spirit of absolute sincerity, simplicity, and confidence with which it is being proclaimed in favour of life, happiness, and harmony in the family of nations.

"With the blessings of Guru Dev, life on earth now is on the doorstep of the perpetual sunshine of the Age of Enlightenment." - Maharishi

This invitation to all governments to solve their problems is a wave of fulfilment of the Silver Jubilee Celebrations of Maharishi's worldwide Transcendental Meditation movement 1957 - 1983.

Advertisement for 'The Voice' featuring Ralph Richardson and other performers.

Advertisement for ENO English National Opera at the London Coliseum, featuring Don Giovanni and Rigoletto.

Advertisement for the Rostropovich Festival at Snape, featuring performances by Rostropovich and other musicians.

Advertisement for the World Government of the Age of Enlightenment, inviting governments to solve their problems.

The dedicated modeller of fashion

I had always been fascinated by shops. I enjoyed pottering with objects and arranging them into patterns. In Jerusalem as a child I loved going into the local corner-shop. Food was scarce, but the couple who owned the shop took pride in displaying their cheeses on marble slabs with net covers like umbrellas and little blue beads around the base. Rows of sausages hung from a pole and on the floor there were sacks full of grain, beautifully laid out. And now, in 1964, I suggested the idea of opening a shop to Fitz. He thought it was silly, as life would revolve around looking after it, but I was feeling more and more infatuated with the idea of having a place to show off the clothes we had been selling through our mail-order business.

We had accumulated lots of rejects and garments that people had sent back to exchange. Without telling Fitz, I hauled them over from our basement warehouse in Motcomb Street to our flat and spent hours arranging them round the living room, hanging them on door frames, fireplaces and cupboards. The next day I telephoned friends and secretaries of fashion writers, announcing a sale.

I put the record player on as loud as I could, playing a Beatles LP. By one o'clock the flat was seething. Every person I had telephoned had told at least 10 others, who in turn had brought friends along. When I telephoned Fitz at his office to come and have a look, I had £500 in a shoe box I was using as a till. Our bedroom had been turned into a changing room. I even had trouble refusing to sell my cushions and casserole dishes. By the time Fitz arrived, the flat looked as if a bomb had hit it. He thought it was a fluke, but for days afterwards people would arrive wanting to know if the sale was still on.

During one of my junk-hunting sprees I spotted a marvellous dilapidated place on the corner of Abingdon Road in Kensington. It had been a chemist's shop and had been closed for quite a while, but there were lots of black and gold signs left and the windows were painted halfway up with scratched black paint with gold-leaf edges. The woodwork outside was covered in peeling blue-grey paint. I fell in love with it instantly.

Suddenly London was filled with long-legged girls and boys

I dragged Fitz down there and he loved it too. We found the landlord, who said he wouldn't take less than £20 a week for the premises. We took it on the spot.

The shop was miles away from anywhere, even from Kensington High Street, which in those days was a place where only old ladies shopped. We were both still working at our jobs. Fitz as an advertising account executive and me as a freelance fashion artist, but we redecorated the place at weekends. Fitz painted the walls navy blue. We bought a beautiful Dutch wardrobe for £40, took the doors off and made them into a cash desk. We made long curtains in a William Morris print. A friend lent us two bronze lamps with huge black shades. I refused to have the peeling exterior repainted.

We asked our manufacturer to make us dresses of one style, a smock with very narrow sleeves, in a range of fabrics. He agreed, as a favour. (Many years later, he revealed that he had felt sorry for us.)

While our stock was being manufactured, we received 2,000 orders by post for a brown chalk-striped smock which had been featured in Woman's Mirror. Two hundred of them arrived, and Fitz decided to store them at the shop as the Motcomb Street basement was already bulging. We delivered the dresses to the shop late one Friday night.

The next morning, Fitz dropped me off at the shop and left to collect some more dresses from the manufacturer. It was 10 o'clock and the curtains were still drawn across the windows. I left the front door and went into the lavatory. When I came out the shop was packed with girls. In concentrated silence they were all trying on the brown chalk-striped smock.

I turned the record player on. I only had one Beatles LP. The louder the music played, the faster the girls moved and the more people appeared in the shop.

A silent queue formed in front of the cash desk. Each girl had a two-guinea dress on her arm. Not one asked if there were any other styles or other sizes. Nobody knew the price; they just held their purses open. By 11 o'clock, I had sold every dress.

As soon as I could get to the phone, I called Fitz and said: "Quick, grab any dress you can." The shop was still full of people waiting for a delivery. When he arrived, the car's hood was down and brown chalk-striped dresses were heaped up in a mountain behind him. Everyone left the shop and we sold in the street, from the car. We were still selling that brown chalk-striped dress in one size and one colour six months later.

Fitz and I now had no other life than Biba. When the shop opened we had both given up our jobs. Every morning we would feel great anxiety. We were

When she founded the Biba boutique, Barbara Hulanicki became the wardrobe mistress of Swinging London. Born in Palestine and brought up in Brighton before training as a fashion artist, she provided the girls of the golden Sixties with an image which amounted to a cultural statement: stick-thin legs protruded from beneath the abbreviated hems of simple dresses striped in mustard and mulberry; wide eyes were ringed with colours to match; floppy felt hats and feather boas accessorized the fantasy. Biba even changed the nature of shopping itself, by promoting an informal mood which turned the Kensington premises into a Saturday rendezvous both for those who set the style and for those who followed it. In the first of three extracts from her forthcoming autobiography, Barbara Hulanicki describes how she and her husband, Stephen Fitz-Simon, conceived a phenomenon girl was prancing around dressed only in her knickers. She was magnetic - her skin was like marble and her features larger than life. It was Julie Christie, getting her wardrobe together for the film Darling.

It was almost a year before the name was painted over the door at Abingdon Road. I didn't like it. It was like branding something. The shop looked much better without a name. If people wanted to find us, they would.

(By the end of 1965, the business had outgrown the Abingdon Road shop. As Swinging London gathered momentum, Biba was moved to larger premises on Kensington Church Street.)

As opening day approached I was getting more and more nervous. Maybe nobody would follow us the extra 500 yards up the road. We orchestrated a moving party from Abingdon Road to Church Street and arranged a photocall for the press. Our girls wheeled rails full of dresses all the way up Abingdon Road and down Kensington High Street to the new shop, followed by photographers. A pantechonicon arrived in Church Street

The more the man in the street whistled, the shorter the skirts became full of hatstands and girls. The girls were holding Biba bags, in case the name of the shop didn't get mentioned in the stories.

I had been stationed in the new shop all alone waiting anxiously for guests to arrive, when it all happened at once. Cilla Black and Cathy McGowan arrived and so did a million other guests and gatecrashers. Cathy and Cilla clambered on to the lorry and helped to unload the hatstands, and the photographers had a field day. Music was thumping in the shop and the wine rapidly disappeared. Everybody had a good time.

When the last guest left it was 6 o'clock in the evening. The floor was awash with spilled wine. We began to bring out the stock and fill the shelves with T-shirts for the official opening the following day. It was a long night. By morning my brain was still whirring but my body had gone to sleep, so we went and had a greasy breakfast at the neighbouring cafe. When we came back there was a queue outside the shop.

My favourite moments were always just before a new shop was to open: the music would be turned on, the girls ready as if to go on stage, tension mounting and - bang - the doors would open and let in the first customers. This time the shop was full of people within moments. They examined everything - we had branched out into many new areas with everything dyed to match in a large spectrum of muted colours. There were big-brimmed hats, double-breasted wool coats, tights, gloves, bags, jumpers and shirts, dresses and underwear. Even the matching feather boas, which I had intended only to use as decoration, sold like hot cakes.

Our first Saturday in Church Street was astonishing. The shop was four times the size of Abingdon Road but as crowded as the little one had been. The pavement outside was milling with people, every window seat was occupied and I even saw our bank manager take a quick look inside. By the early afternoon the hatstands were bare but still more people came to look.

Two weeks after Church Street opened, in March 1966, a team of reporters from Time magazine arrived. The next day it was Stern and then Paris Match. In their usual unimpressed way, our girls and the customers continued to crowd the shop. America and Europe had discovered, or invented, Swinging London. Long before this the man in the street had taken exposed thighs as part of life, but all of a sudden there were wolf whistles and cries of "Ooh, look at that one". The more they whistled, the shorter the skirts became. Every week I thought that we surely couldn't shorten them any more, but magically there were a few odd inches to go.

It was through absolute ignorance that the mini reached the streets. The short skirt was on the way but it was only seen in showrooms. Courtesans had made a strong impact on the world with his space-age dresses. Mary Quant was the first British designer to show the mini but I still say that our manufacturer, dear old Theo Savva, was the man responsible for putting the mini on the high street. When the jersey allocated for a little suit arrived at his factory it was steaming hot from the finishers. As Fitz bombarded Theo with telephone calls for more and more stock for the opening of the shop, Theo cut the somewhat stretchy double jersey without "resting" it. Jersey that is not rested soon relaxes itself back to its proper width. It was not the uncut fabric that rested - it was the skirts! When I saw the delivery I nearly had a heart attack. The skirts were only 10 inches long. God, I thought, we'll go bust - we'll never be able to sell them. I couldn't sleep, but that little fluted skirt walked out on customers as fast as we could get it on to the stands.

© Foundplace Ltd. 1983

TOMORROW: The final dream takes shape

moreover... Miles Kington

Passion dons a uniform

Last month we created a new publishing house, Mills & Bang, to market a completely new form of novel: romantic military fiction, aimed to satisfy the fantasies of both men and women.

The response was remarkable: all titles were sold out within days of hitting the bookshelves, and Jumping into Passion appeared briefly on the Cross-Channel best-seller list.

Now, Moreover Enterprises Ltd is proud to announce a further selection of Mills and Bang novels - the novels that are as tough as old boots yet as soft as a first kiss!

Cavalry Tulle, by Yolanda Dabbin Debbie felt the wind streaming through her hair as she kicked Marmaduke into a gallop. How good it felt to be on her favourite horse once more, the soft turf of the downs beneath his hooves and the English Channel twinkling in the sun, way in the distance. Her memories of Oscar seemed just a bad dream.

Suddenly she became gradually aware that another rider was closing in to meet her. Crossly, she reined in and waited for him to arrive.

"I'm sorry," said the newcomer affably, "but this is private property. Restricted, you know."

"To whom, may I ask?"

"Members of the regiment. Captain Bruce Derwent at your service."

"And I," said Debbie coolly, "am Major Deborah Merryweather, newly joined to the regiment."

Derwent's face changed. But before he could bring himself to salute her, a shot rang out and whistled past them. Quick as a flash he had leapt from his horse, bundled her from hers and rolled them both into a safe position in the grass.

"Who's trying to kill us?" she gasped, thrilling strangely to the touch of his uniformed arm.

"Nobody. It's an army firing range. They could kill anybody. By the way," he said, his mouth not six inches from her perfect ear. "I believe you know my best friend, Oscar Threadgold. Major." He added reluctantly.

Oscar! His dark handsome face came before her, with its twisted smile. Then she looked at Bruce's sandy open features. How were their destinies to be intertwined?

"Perhaps you could put me down now, Captain." It was a long night.

A Man's Girl, by Grenada Pina "Sorry to bother you, sir," said the sergeant, "but I'd like to have a word about Private Simple."

"What's the trouble?" said the captain. "Fact is," said the sergeant, "I think Private Simple's a woman."

The captain drummed his pencil on the desk. "Extraordinary thing to say, sergeant. What makes you think so?"

"Difficult to pin down, sir. The way he walks. The extra large battle tunic. The tendency to use lipstick and shave his legs."

"Does he pull his weight otherwise?"

"Absolutely. Best soldier in the platoon."

"Then I wouldn't worry too much, sergeant. We need all the good men we can get, even if they are women."

Damn, thought the captain. They're on to Yvonne's and my little scheme. It was only as the door closed that the captain realized there was something odd about the sergeant. He was wearing high-heeled shoes. Were their destinies to be intertwined in some strange way?

Free Fall Love, by Alberta Smithwick Rowena, flushing, went hot and cold. She felt limp. There was a roaring in her ears. Not surprising, as she was halfway through her first ever parachute jump.

"I say!" said a voice. She looked round. There was a man in the air near her. "I say. I'd open your parachute if I were you!"

How stupid of her. She pulled the ring and the huge white canopy opened above her. The man smiled and put his thumb up as he floated away. She bated him instantly, and yet there was something about his warm crinkly eyes that told her their destinies would, given half a chance, be on the same downward path together.

(Other titles coming soon: One Girl's Resistance by Jeanne Hackett, NATO Nancy by Brian Hastings, Passion in the Pay Corps by Marjory Hanrahan, etc. etc.)

CONCISE CROSSWORD (No 125)

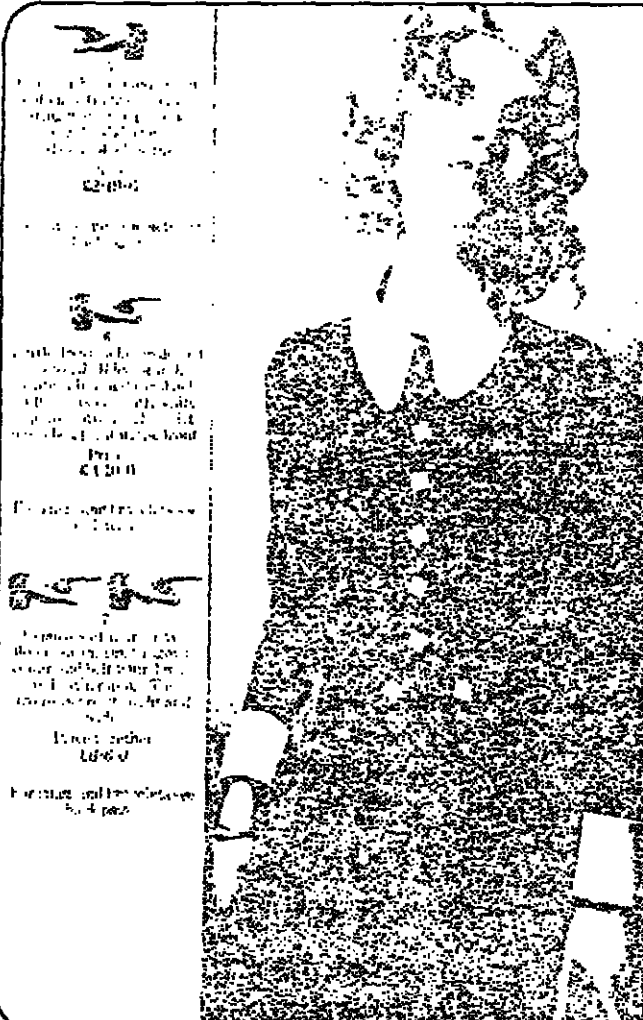

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20
21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30

- ACROSS
- 1 Joint interest (11)
 - 2 Of the flames (7)
 - 3 Reduce (5)
 - 4 Pig's back (3)
 - 5 Catcher's glove (4)
 - 6 Den (4)
 - 7 Strong protest (6)
 - 8 Redder (4)
 - 9 S African mountain (4)
 - 10 Conflict (6)
 - 11 Fine spray (4)
 - 12 Russian ruler (4)
 - 13 Ban bomb group (11,1)
 - 14 Perfect (5)
 - 15 Instill (7)
 - 16 Bug killer (11)
- DOWN
- 1 Concede (5)
 - 2 Ballet skirt (4)
 - 3 Apiece (4)
 - 4 False (4)
 - 5 Moslem ruler's area (7)
 - 6 Bedroom cleaner (11)
 - 7 Chili (11)
 - 8 Expose to air (6)
 - 9 In addition (3)
 - 10 Achieve (6)
 - 11 Out of date (7)
 - 12 Wager (3)
 - 13 Spasm burn (5)
 - 14 Indication (5)
 - 15 Food regimen (4)
 - 16 Specification (4)

SOLUTION TO No 124
 ACROSS: 1 Decibel 5 Hopes 8 UFO 9 Spruce
 10 Usage 11 Beta 12 Heptad 14 Characterless
 15 Egg trip 18 Also 21 Ultra 22 Oxidate 23 Tax
 24 Endue 25 Yogurt
 DOWN: 1 Dose 2 Curse 3 Baccalaureate 4 Lurch
 5 Housebreaking 6 Prattle 7 Sep past
 13 Schedule 15 Abortif 17 Proxy 19 Staff
 20 Bent

Hatstands and mini-dresses: Stephen Fitz-Simon and Barbara Hulanicki surrounded by some of the original Biba girls

Above left: styles (and prices) from the 1969 catalogue. Top right: Cilla Black and Cathy McGowan help the Biba dollies in the move to Church Street. Lower left: an original Biba logotype. Lower right: Stephanie Farrow, a favourite Biba model never sure if our customers would come back again.

One Tuesday morning the weather was awful. The sky was grey, there was a feel of a thunderstorm coming. The shop was empty. By noon the shop was still empty. I was feeling really depressed - it had all been a flash in the pan, the bonanza was over. We dashed up the road to Kensington High Street. It was empty, too. Not a soul, not one old lady with a shopping basket on two little wheels.

We soon realized that the shopping public reacts identically to the weather and the political situation. When they are depressed, they all depressed at the same time. When the sun comes out they are all happy and go out shopping. When the sun is hot they go to the park to sunbathe and you've lost them. When it rains, if you're a little shop they don't come, if you are a big store they stay with you all day. But it was this nucleus that we found so exciting. For Fitz it was like fishing, and for me it was like hunting through junk shops: you never knew when you would catch a big one.

Our Saturdays were always spectacular, whatever the weather. If it was raining, the shop stank of wet wool and the floor would be awash. If it was sunny the groups of newly-found friends would congregate outside the shop. It became a meeting place. Years later I had letters from people who met at Biba, spent their courtship in Biba on Saturdays, married, had babies and wrapped them in Biba purple nappies. Recently I heard a beautiful girl at the airport calling, "Biba, Biba, to a little girl of about six in a straw hat and smock. We had become a big part of many people's lives.

At 26 Fitz and I felt much older than the others, like Mum and Dad. We worried about the girls who worked in the shop, and their fast lives. Some could cope, but many fell by the wayside by the time they were 19.

I don't think our girls were promiscuous; they picked and chose. If they fancied someone they went right out and got what they were after instead of weaving webs and hypocritical traps, as we had to in the 1950s. In their flats and bedsits they had no mother waiting for them to see if they came home with a crumpled dress. In the buoyant mid-1960s they all had jobs and they were not used to eating massive meals. They were the postwar babies who had been deprived of nourishing protein in childhood and grew up into beautiful skinny people. A designer's dream. It didn't take much for them to look outstanding. The simpler the better, the shorter the better. Their legs seemed to be never-ending. Suddenly London was filled with long-legged girls and boys who became envied all over the world.

The girls and boys started to travel on new all-in cheap holidays, and to pick up continental elegance, too. There were masses of them and they all seemed to flock to Abingdon Road. With Cathy McGowan endorsing our clothes by wearing them nearly every week to present Ready Steady Go on TV, there was a sort of underground grapevine which was growing daily. As soon as there was a new style the tomtoms would beat out a message wrapped them in Biba purple nappies. Recently I heard a beautiful girl at the airport calling, "Biba, Biba, to a little girl of about six in a straw hat and smock. We had become a big part of many people's lives.

Inside the shop, the Biba girl became more mysterious

The girls aped Cathy's long hair and eye-covering fringe. Soon their little white faces were growing heavier with stage make-up, lids weighed down with doll-like thick fake lashes. Their matchstick legs were encased in pale tights and low-cut patent pumps. Miniskirts led to the adoption of tights. They seldom needed to wear roll-ons or bras. Their bosoms and tummies

Abridged from From A to Biba by Barbara Hulanicki, published by Hutchinson on September 5, price £8.95.

مكتبات الأصيل

MODERN TIMES

A sideways look at the British way of life

Not very long ago, when privilege and wealth were the prerogative of the upper classes, there were some people called Emsworth who had titles and butlers called Beach. They also owned a lot of the land over which they hunted, shot and fished. When they travelled they stayed in other Emsworths' houses or the best hotels. They were a jolly crowd and often asked all their friends and relations to come and play at weekends. Sadly the Emsworths were living on borrowed time. Even in the shires the social and economic structure was changing. Most of the poor got richer while the Emsworths found it increasingly difficult to make ends meet - so much so that they sometimes had to sell off a wing of a house, or a few hundred acres, or even charge people called Smith, who wanted to see how the Emsworths lived, a couple of shillings to come and look over the house. At the same time as all this was going on a lot of people were making a lot of money, more often than not out of selling for thousands of pounds the news cottages in which the Emsworths' retainers had lived rent-free for years. Or from installing central heating systems or keeping books or shops. These people (called Goldfingers) believed in property and looked round for ways of making even more money. And all the while the Smiths (of whom there were infinitely more than there were Emsworths or Goldfingers) beavered away in their small corners and sometimes cast a wistful eye at the Emsworths and Goldfingers, who seemed to have all the fun and owned all the emblems of wealth - horses and boats and lakes and miles of river bank - and wished they could join in. Then one day, by chance, Lord Emsworth and Mr Goldfinger and Mr Smith happened to meet and between them cooked up a brilliant wheeze. (It was Goldfinger's idea but Emsworth and Smith quickly saw the logic of it.) To Lord Emsworth, Goldfinger said: "You've got the land but no money; I've got the money and a good head for business - and you" (to Smith) "who haven't much of either could, if all your friends chipped in, afford to buy a part of all the things you've dreamed of owning but could never afford." And so the syndicate was born - a compromise, like most things in life, but one which gave all the members a slice of property and a slice of a dream. Thereafter syndicates and partnerships and consortia sprang up all over the place. Wherever there was a piece of property or a coveted object far too expensive for any one individual to buy, the syndicate bought. They purchased minor stately homes and turned them into country clubs or health farms, they bought yachts and racehorses, and sold shares to people who wanted to sail or swan around the Members' Enclosure; they even bought old masters and when they were not gathering dust in a vault, took it in turn to hang them in their various drawing rooms.

Lord Emsworth was happy because he was able to stay on in his estate and pay Fred the gamekeeper, and though he would have preferred not to have all the Smiths and Goldfingers wandering over his land and fishing his rivers, he was a realist and knew that this way at least there might be a bit left for his son. Smith was delighted because his wife could afford a tan and told all her friends that she owned a racehorse (though in fact she had only one-twelfth share). Goldfinger was probably the happiest of all because, apart from the shares he owned in all the syndicates, he had made enough money to buy a few horses and lakes and houses outright. Puffing his pipe of an evening, Lord Emsworth mused over a book of proverbs. He found an old Spanish one which said something to the effect that "he who divides gets the worst share", which confirmed what he had known all along, that foreigners didn't know what they were talking about. Judy Froshaug

Penny Perick

Doctor's public orders

Our two most popular national pastimes, nosing into the private lives of the famous and worrying about the state of our health, have been cleverly combined in a new television series to be screened by HTV in the autumn. Called Consider Yourself, it films various celebrities doing what comes naturally and then hauls them in front of a doctor and psychologist to be given a serious talking-to. Katie Boyle was so obviously a picture of gorgeous, glowing good health that she escaped censure. Roddy Llewellyn, though in good shape, was made so nervous by the proceedings that he reached out for more cigarettes than his normal ration. Darts player Eric Bristow turned out to be the villain of the piece: overweight, under-exercised, much given to late nights, late meals and lavish boozing. However, he was so obviously fit and happy that he got away with a peevish warning to change his wicked ways by the time he's 30. The moral of that seems to be that a reckless youth is healthier than a mispent middle age. What surprised Terry Miller, the programme's producer, was the way the normally self-confident celebrities floundered helplessly when caught out in their bad habits. I understand how they felt when exposed to close questioning of the medical kind since, being pale and peaky looking, I am always having to submit to this kind of inquisition. Why don't I wear a vest? Why do I spend Sunday afternoons on a sofa with a pile of novels and a mug of coffee instead of getting some roses in my cheeks? Undeterred by my churlish ripostes, my husband even tenderly inquires every morning how I slept although by now he must have noticed that every night I fall into a snoring, ten hour stupor. It's getting impossible for most of us to claim 101 per cent fitness in the light of so many diagnose-it-yourself books flooding the market, all of them crammed with diagrams of parts of the body you never worried about before because you didn't know you were carrying them around with you. Ever since the reading public has worked itself through Our Bodies, Ourselves, it's fatal to ask "How do you do?" since you will probably be told. Someone's state of health is considered a suitable topic for conversation in a way the state of their bank balance or the state of their sex life is not. I feel sorry for David Steel, innocently turning up for a refreshing weekend at David Owen's country house and getting instead the doctor's bedside manner and advice on the lines of "why don't you take a good long rest... don't think of coming back to politics for a while... come back and see me again in 1997". Just the sort of thing to make him wonder whether he was likely to last the night. I shall be interested to see if the subjects of Consider Yourself do just what the television doctor ordered. Will Anne Nightingale give up smoking? Will Leslie Thomas lose some weight? Such riveting questions should not be left hanging in the airwaves and I certainly hope HTV is planning a second series, provisionally entitled Reconsider Yourself. There is a lot of serious wardrobe confusion about. Jeanne Turnock was sacked from her job at a crematorium for wearing trousers; MP Edwina Currie's pink tracksuit got some pretty old-fashioned looks from the honourable members and barrister Anne Mollathieu's correct but dreary black working outfit was denied the "uniform" status that would have given her some tax relief. We could simplify matters by adopting, to the last working woman among us, the American dress-former success business look, worn by female secretaries and company presidents alike and consisting of a sober suit with a tailored jacket worn over a crisp blouse in an unexciting colour. The streets of any American city are full of women identically if uninspiringly dressed and they never wake up in the morning yelling, "What on earth am I going to wear today?" Flavia Corkscrew is on holiday

Snooks and shares

FISH AND SNIPS

Tim Nelson (left) landowner who runs a trout fishing syndicate. Basically we've got 14 acres of water, consisting of lakes - stocked with brown rainbow trout. There are 35 members of the syndicate a good number - coming right across the board from a director of Barclays Bank to a local scrap metal merchant. I chose people very carefully, by interview, to make sure that they're not going to abuse the free system. I don't like the sort of person who talks about the masses of fish he catches or who hauls fish out for the sake of it. We have boat and bank fishing: single fly, wet, dry or nymph. We don't allow hares, the whole idea, if you're a sporting man, is to fly-fish. A full rod costs £248 a year allows you to fish every day in season. You're limited to seven fish a week or two on any one day. If you fish on, you buy. Half rods cost £138 and you can fish for three days a month on any day of your choice. There are a number of vacancies each year, but very few members leave. When you're out in the middle of the lake you know the phone isn't going to ring and you never really know what's there though you've heard talk of or seen "the big one". Members are not required to contribute any labour. I have a bailiff for that. I expect members to respect each other and the fish. This year for instance, one night the water temperature was on a lethal limit for trout, and we lost 300. Otherwise we leave people very much alone.

HORSE TRADING

Henry Ponsoby (right) syndicate manager of Shefford Bloodstock Services. The racing Establishment has always rather looked down its nose at syndicates. At first the Jockey Club didn't like the whole idea of working class people owning horses, and never contemplated people putting together syndicates professionally. Now they must see the benefits. If I were to count up all the money that's gone back into racing since I started business in 1977, it would amount to about £750,000 - money the sport would not have had but for syndication. The maximum permitted size of a race-horse owner's syndicate is 12 people, and no person can be a member of more than 12 syndicates, though you can be in as many partnerships of up to four people as you like and can have between 5,000 and 15,000 members in a company such as we've just launched for only £200 per share. When I started business 40 per cent of my owners were probably in the hotel trade. Then we had green-grocers, Leyland shop stewards, printers, retired army officers - sons of peers of the realm, policemen - and masses of women. A lot of men bought shares for wives or girlfriends. Now there are a lot more up-market people - chairmen, company directors. People buy in because owning a racehorse is glamorous. If you own a horse you can rub shoulders with the rich and famous, we had a horse running at Cheltenham in the same race as the Queen Mother's horse, both trained by Fulke Walwyn. We've beaten Sangster's horses and the Queen's, and with the new company our aim is to win the Derby.

ROOM SERVICE

Christopher Chapman (left) vice chairman of the Prestige Hotels. There are not that many smart, privately owned hotels left in Britain but there is a growing demand for the kind of quality that used to be associated with the best British hotels, nostalgia for comfort and service and good food and personal attention. Although the hotels in the group are very different, we all pride ourselves on the high standards we try to achieve, but there is no way in which we could individually afford to do so if we hadn't joined together. This way we can afford a central London office and a full-time marketing executive, and an overseas representative - particularly important for us in North America, where so many of our guests come from. Because of the very high standards we set there is a natural limit to the number of hotels who can join the group (we are 35 at present). We recently re-examined our standards and raised the minimum. Unfortunately there were some casualties but in the process we attracted others who said that previously they had hesitated to apply "because we didn't quite like all the company you were keeping". Last year we had to double our subscription to £4,000 a year. We trust each other as individuals and as a group. All the hotels which apply to join are inspected anonymously by our members, several times, before they are proposed. It's because of joint interests and joint surveillance that we are, I think a kind of elite.

THE BACK LEGS

Audrey Slaughter (above) former editor of Over 21, part owner of a racehorse. There's no way I could have afforded to buy a horse outright. But I like the glamour and excitement of the races - all those working chaps putting their money on the last race and pretty girls hanging on to their hats - and I fancy the idea of swanking around a bit as an owner, choosing the colours. Unfortunately all the best ones had gone. I used to say I'd love a share in a horse. Then a friend came along with a Jockey Club steward who's also a breeder and they found me Window Shopper, a very pretty two-year-old out of Town and Country and Watch 'em Go. She has a nice narrow head and isn't too long in the back. When we first bought her I hadn't an idea about all the extras that go with owning a horse - getting it registered with Wetherby's, paying the vet and the VAT and getting it a passport. Every month you get these rather frightening bills! I am the chief shareholder, having five shares which cost £355 each. David Blacker, the steward, kept two and so did our friend Count Caki, who was responsible for finding her, really. And a lady called Popsi, whom I haven't yet met, has the other three. I think the idea of owning a bit of a horse probably appeals to millions of women. I'm very pleased with ours. I've no desire to go and pat her nose or give her a sugar lump, but it must be lovely to lead in the winner!

THE SAME BOAT

Tony Chappell (left) managing director of Tarquim Timesharing. The cost of buying a small yacht is prohibitive to many people, but spread among 15 or 20 it becomes possible. We even have members who could afford to buy outright but don't want to make a large outlay on a boat they may use for only two weeks a year and which, for the remaining period, will be idle in the Mediterranean, deteriorating. And maintenance costs, alone, would be massive. People want ownership for a variety of reasons: many have found that yachting is a pleasant family activity but that sort of boat whose cost would come within their budget is not exactly comfortable - a trailer-sailer or a speedboat for example. And then there's the glamour. As people's expectations develop they look at what their finances will allow against the style of life that is attainable. I regard the Trader 37 as equal in status to a four-bedroomed villa in the South of France, near the sea, with its own swimming pool. There's a fantastic cross-section of time sharers - a lot from the better professions (though no solicitors yet). People would feel inadequate on a yacht if their experience was so scant that they didn't have the confidence to anchor in the swish bays between the millionaires and summer up, like Charles Forte, a cassata from the ice-cream boat. There's no other social disqualification. On the Côte d'Azur the richest are the tattiest dressers, or those wear

BANG GANG

Jonathan Abbott (right) writer, and life-long shooter with his own syndicate. Shooting's an expensive sport, like yacht-racing, or polo, if you come in from outside. The best number of people to shoot with is about six, anything over eight is not really on, and 10. In my father's day anything beyond that was referred to as a hotel shoot. A syndicate is a bit like Dad's Army - a lot depends on the people in it. It's never the same as a private shoot of course, but it's a matter of finance. The cost of running a shoot could be £12,000 a year if you had to pay for everything. Split between six of you it's feasible. It costs less of course if one of the things is free - say one member is a landowner, or a farmer, with a gamekeeper. There are various kinds of syndicates - shared-expenses syndicates, wandering syndicates. Some landowners are deterred by the whole idea and invite people to pay to shoot. The danger with this is that those who are paying are often suspicious that they're not getting the best shooting but are paying for the owner to shoot with his friends in the best woods or on Boxing Day. Anyone with the slightest bit of intelligence who can produce a place to shoot and someone to look after it could form a syndicate: that part isn't difficult - it's the people. There are an awful lot of wingers about. The rules are simple: respect the shoot and obey the captain. Interviews by Judy Froshaug

Dubai daily from Heathrow at 10.00. Gulf Air 21 Tristar flights a week. The warmest possible welcome, complimentary refreshments and entertainments, choice of International and Middle Eastern cuisine, honoured by La Chaine des Rotisseurs. There's no better businessman's choice to the Gulf. GULF AIR Spread your wings

Philip Towle warns against the new spirit of Gaullism

Nationalism, the threat to Nato

John Nott, echoing the line set by de Gaulle. Right, Senator Stevens, a trend to a new isolationism

In proportion to their influence, too much attention is devoted to the minority who criticize Nato strategy from the left and too little to the attitudes of the general public and to those who criticize it from the centre or right - the "neo-Gaullists". This latter group, which includes a number of European politicians, some close to power, is more influential and therefore a far more insidious long-term threat to the Atlantic alliance than the small and obviously demoralized membership of CND, whose policies have been massively rejected at the polls.

Mr John Nott, the former Defence Secretary, declared himself a Gaullist and supported the Trident programme as a hedge against Nato's collapse. He also, in a speech at Oxford, has said that the US has subordinated European detente in the interests of its world struggle with the Soviet Union. He has called for the formation of a European alliance with Nato and the development of a European nuclear force.

Sir James Cable, former head of the Foreign Office Planning Staff, has called Britain's dependence on the US an addictive drug and suggested that it may have contributed to our national decline. He has also called for Britain to follow the French lead in defence policy, to close the US bases here and to limit Britain's commitment to the alliance mainly to maritime forces.

None of those quoted would like to see the precipitate collapse of Nato (and neither of course did de Gaulle) but, by suggesting that the alliance may disappear or that we should weaken our commitment to it, they advocate policies which could set in train an irreversible movement towards such a collapse. This is particularly so because their criticism coincides with growing attacks on the alliance from many Americans who resent the discrepancy between the US and European defence budgets.

When Nato was established in 1949 the US was the greatest economic power in history and it seemed reasonable to ask it to protect the impoverished Europeans. By agreeing to this request Washington overtook all the foreign policy traditions which the US had built up since independence. But today the Europeans are not impoverished; wages in Copenhagen or Hamburg are now generally as good as those in Detroit or Dallas. Yet in 1981 the Americans spent $782 per head on defence while the Danes spent $280.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the traditional US hostility towards involvement in Europe has shown signs of revival, and that the Republican whip in the Senate, Senator Ted Stevens, and others have sought to reduce the US forces stationed in Europe.

Is the time then ripe for a mutually agreed divorce? In July 1969 The Times declared, "at present 250 million peoples of Western Europe rely on 200 million Americans to defend them from 200 million Russians although the Russians have 700 million angry Chinese at their backs. This proposition has only to be stated for it to be seen to be unreasonable."

Since then that proposition has been put with increasing frequency and force. On the other hand, if 350,000 American servicemen stationed in Western Europe, and the incomparably the most successful arms control measures evolved since 1945.

The only advantage which the Europeans might acquire from the break-up of Nato would be a slight reduction in the risks of becoming involved in a war which began somewhere else in the world. But this cannot be taken for granted: in most cases Europe's strategic interests in the Third World coincide with those of the US, while, if the US and Soviet Union were to go to war, it is inconceivable that a strategically vital area such as Europe would be left unscathed.

If Nato did collapse we should most certainly try to fashion an adequate West European defence. But we should be aware of the magnitude of the problems involved. West Europeans can still do much, if they so choose, to strengthen the cohesion and military effectiveness of the alliance by increasing their share of the defence burden to a more equitable level and thereby working out a mutually acceptable relationship with the US.

But if the alliance did disintegrate, through a combination of insurmountable tensions and flawed perceptions of interest, no alternative strategy - whether in the form of neutralism or of military cooperation among the Europeans - could ensure the long-term security of Europe as effectively as the alliance has done in the past. It is above all in the period of uncertainty and confusion which would follow the collapse of Nato that each state would be most vulnerable to Soviet threats and blandishments and the dangers of war would be most acute.

The author is a Fellow of Queen's College, Cambridge. His article is based on a monograph, Europe Without America: Could We Defend Ourselves? published by the Institute for European Defence and Strategic Studies, 13-14 Golden Square, London W1.

Gerald Kaufman

When a ticket to the top cost 1s 4d

Two months after its disaster in the general election the Labour Party is still in a condition of shock. This is healthy, it would have been unhealthy if party members had shrugged off the events of June 9 as just another setback, easily capable of being put right after a gentle period of reassessment. Very few have made that ostrich-like mistake. Indeed, there has been an almost masochistic tendency to pile on the gloom.

Many Members of Parliament who narrowly squeaked home (often in constituencies previously regarded as safe), rather than congratulating themselves and each other on their survival have instead in many cases been assessing their chances of re-election next time with some pessimism. In analysis after analysis, prominent Labour figures have harshly demonstrated not only the near-elimination of the party's support in vast tracts of the country, but also the disturbing drift away from Labour in areas whose staunch loyalty was for generations taken for granted.

Even the ludicrously protracted leadership election has brought its benefits. The four candidates, unable to keep silent during the four-month campaign, have issued manifestos, written articles, delivered speeches, taken part in debates. As well as making ritual speeches about aspects of policy, they have felt obliged again and again to return to discussing the state of the party. That some of their conclusions seem to me to be mistaken is not the point. In thinking hard about the party's principles, its role, its disorganised recent past and its discouraging potential for the future, they have enabled - perhaps forced - the membership to participate in that thinking process too.

The leadership election process itself has been inevitably subjected to reappraisal, little of it favourable. The party of the people - as it still thinks of itself - has been compelled unhappily to accept that for the first time in 80 years anyone seeking its highest offices has to have money. Affiliated organizations demand copies, sometimes in the thousands, of statements by candidates; the cost of production and of postage is phenomenal. Candidates have to tour the country, addressing Labour Party and trade union meetings; the travelling expenses are considerable.

When Harold Wilson was elected leader 20 years ago, his election expenses totalled 1s 4d (the cost of telephone calls asking over-ardent supporters not to canvass for him). Now the Labour press is full of appeals by campaign managers for campaigning funds. Many have come to believe that this is not the way to conduct Labour Party elections.

Again, the internal democracy of the trade unions has become a subject of debate, in a manner not agreeable to many leading unions but extremely salutary for the prospects of genuine democracy within those unions. Decisions to favour one candidate or another, if made by an executive council or a delegate conference, have been unconvincedly defended. Even consultation of members, embarked upon with whatever good intentions, has often been cumbersome, incompetent or faulty. It is clear that, even if the electoral college survives in its present form, it will be difficult to repeat these elephantine procedures in future contests. If this election convinces unions that they will have to put their own house in order, such a conversion will undermine many of the glib arguments that Norman Tebbit has used in seeking to vindicate his recently published anti-trade union proposals.

Labour activists know that the party cannot be allowed to drift, simply because events, instead of allowing such a drift, will provide an almost non-stop series of tests by which Labour's efforts at recovery will be gauged. By-elections will come along and Penrith, providing Labour with yet another lost deposit has demonstrated that unless the apparently remorseless electoral trend is reversed, each by-election could be a further milestone along the road of the party's decline. In little more than nine months, as will come the local elections, and shortly after them the elections to the European Assembly, in which Labour could have difficulty in defending even its present poor representation.

Labour on June 9 was sustained, insofar as it was sustained at all, by the residual loyalty of 28 per cent of the electorate. Many of those voters were giving a final chance to the party of their parents and grandparents. Each of those previous supporters, as well as the allegiance of new voters, will have to be won anew every time the polling booths open. Labour cannot afford to take a single elector for granted any longer. The next hurdle will come at the party conference, now less than seven weeks away. Even if that hurdle is surmounted, there will still be more ahead capable of sending the party sprawling. If Labour fails at the first hurdle, many spectators may have lost interest by the time the next is reached.

The author is Labour MP for Manchester, Gorton

THE TIMES DIARY

Diary divide

There will be a fringe beyond the fringe at this year's Labour Party conference in Brighton. Party headquarters had refused to list in the conference diary meetings organized by groups which are not on the official register. That includes, of course, the Socialist and Labour Victory, Briefing, Labour Campaign, Ireland, and the Labour Abortion Rights Campaign. Tribune received an invitation to list details of its meeting. Ken Livingstone's paper, Labour Herald, did not (though it may yet be admitted). Mandy Moore of Socialists for Labour Victory says her organization will aim to get an "alternative diary" with a comprehensive list of the week's events into the hands of every delegate. "It is the diary which most delegates follow when deciding how to spend their evenings", she says, "so being excluded is quite important."

String along

PHSausage jokes are coming in as thick and, dare I say, as stodgy as the sausages themselves, of which the classic wartime memory is that they were half bread because butchers found it difficult to make both ends meet, and so customers did not know whether to put mustard on them or marmalade. The popular favourite of the moment is the man who goes to the doctor and says: "My friends all say I'm mad because I like sausages." "That's no problem - I rather like sausages myself." "Oh good - you can come round and see my collection." Today's British Sausage Time clock, though, goes to A. Smith of SLL for this risible riddle. "I did Harold Wilson want the ketchup?" "Because he was past the sauce age (passed the sausage)." Oh dear, I think I've burst my skin.

BARRY FANTONI

"Cheer up! I've just seen a brace of animal liberators"

The leader...

National pride may not be appropriate on such an occasion, but it is true that the European Community Youth Orchestra, who give their first Prom tonight, include more British players than from any other EEC nation. Of the 134 players chosen from 4,000 who auditioned, 44 are British. Next most numerous are the Germans, with 20 fewer.

Daisy, Daisy!

I have had a polite phone call from Henry Hardy of the literary University Press offering literary immortality to the winner of our Saturday competition to fill the gap in the manuscript of Daisy Ashford's The Life of Father McSwiney, but only if we correct a misprint which crept in. When the second edition of the book is published Dr Hardy hopes to include the winning entry (suitably asterisked) so as to complete the sense of the Pope's après-theatre activities. But the gap which has to be filled is of about 34 words between "in his Public" and "was rather" and about three words between "was rather" and "they caught the fleas". Aspiring imitators of four-year-old prose style please note.

Underhand

A sharp dispute has arisen between the leading auction houses and the Victoria & Albert Museum. It concerns the latter's cricket team, which is alleged to be full of ringers. The V & A recently played Society's and announced that Tomorrow they meet Christie's and the antecedents of their team will be closely scrutinized. "It is no good playing febrile types who turn out in Fiorucci track suits and stand on the boundary remarking the too, too Turmeresque sky, oblivious to the ball flying past them", says the V & A's captain, Nicky Bird. "Our players all have connexion with the Museum. Our opening bowler, for example, sheltered in the doorway during a shower. We feel it is not how you play the game, but whether you win or lose."

This is the product of four years' high-powered market research by the British Airports Authority and Breadwinners Ltd, concessionaires for a line of souvenirs that are expected to smarten up the unacceptable face of aviation in this country. Badges, T-shirts, even teddy bears are on offer to catch the air traveller at an impressionable age and fix a cuddly image in his tiny mind. Harry Heathrow, Gary Stanwick, Stanley Stansted, Gordon Glasgow, Percy Prestwick and Archie Aberdeen are merely the vanguard in a merchandising experiment that Breadwinners is confident will take off in a big way. PHS

Lest we forget: the great memorials

White elephants or national heritage? Gillian Tindall previews an exhibition opening in London tomorrow

The grave may not be either a fine or private place, but the law protects it today far more assiduously than it does the abode of the living: a dead body has a more secure tenure of its six feet of earth than of any house occupied in life. Tenants can be evicted, property compulsorily purchased, whole districts can be, and have been, swept away - but a special Act of Parliament is commonly needed to dislodge the dead from their resting place. Even where this does not apply (in the municipal cemeteries as opposed to the privately owned ones) the public health-cum-ecclesiastical regulations covering the removal and reinterment of remains offer a formidable deterrent.

In any case there is such popular prejudice against digging up the dead that local authorities will not usually risk an outcry by suggesting it, and such property companies as have felt a passing temptation towards what they assume to be a choice piece of potential real estate have almost always changed their minds and slunk off when the realities of the situation have been made plain to them. It has proved extremely difficult for cemetery owners to sell off even unconsecrated and unutilised segments of their land: both Highgate in north London and Nunhead in the south such a scheme has been mooted at one time or another in an attempt to stave off the imminent bankruptcy of the companies concerned, and in both instances the protests were such that the scheme was abandoned.

People don't much want to look after their local cemeteries or pay for them to be looked after, but they have a largely unfounded dread of anyone putting them to any other use. Even attempts to turn old burial grounds into gardens, the one use readily sanctioned by the law, can become contentious.

Stone to dust? Nature gradually reclaims Nunhead cemetery in south London

Both Highgate and Nunhead offer a fine example of a further paradox in a topic riddled with paradoxes. Both were established in 1839 and 1840 respectively, by the London Cemetery Company; with 37 and 52 acres apiece, they were part of the hygienic (and profitable) movement of the times to remove death from the "choked charnel houses" of City churchyards and install it more commodiously in spacious suburban grounds. Yet a hundred-odd years later, history has come around in a circle: Highgate, Nunhead, Tower Hamlets and the like have, in turn, become choked with the dead and with their dilapidated funerary furniture, and once again words such as "decay", "disease" and "desecration" are invoked in a plea that someone should do something about the situation. A wild garden is all very well, but a vandalized jungle defeats every purpose. Most of the once-profitable companies are extinct or in liquidation, their one capital asset transformed into a remarkable but appalling white elephant for which no one wants to be financially responsible. The very cult of death which exacerbated the problem of the dead. For centuries, most people were buried simply in wooden shrouds, and wooden crosses were the norm: returning to dust meant just that because, within a hundred years, both visible and invisible relics obligingly rotted away. The universal use of the coffin and the general introduction of stone memorials in the eighteenth century changed all that - and indeed subverted the whole purpose of consigning a body to the earth.

The private family grave, purchased "in perpetuity" and marked by a substantial edifice, is a logical absurdity, a vain assertion of this life and their power to transcend even mortality. Thus the final paradox is that these old cemeteries have no value as an evocation of loved individuals - they evoke, rather, the knockabout drama of tannoy-boogies and ghoul - but they are valuable as a social record and as a repository of sculpture. Highgate's horse, lion and recumbent dog are well known - and may be viewed again, in photographs, at the exhibition, at the Museum of London - but almost all the big London cemeteries and many of the provincial ones have a line in weeping angels, be-willed urns and eccentric canopies.

Quis custodiet? The sums of money once paid by the grave owners to have them looked after have been rendered desirous by time, inflation and the inroads of nature; and in any case, these works of art, in their now-wild setting, are not private property but a public legacy. William Morris's dictum, originally applied to buildings, seems apposite to cemeteries also: "These... do not belong to us only. They belonged to our forefathers and will belong to our descendants unless we play them false... We are only trustees for those who will come after us."

Yes, but who are to be the trustees? Local authorities, understandably, are either unwilling or inefficient in assuming the burden of the upkeep of what is not just a local institution: bodies of local people may be dedicated but lack both real power and funds. This month an appeal for Highgate is being launched - but the real need is a campaign for a national body comparable with the National Trust to assume overall control for what is, after all, a national asset.

Why the sugar isle is in such a stir

Port Louis, Mauritius. As the campaign for the Mauritian general election on Sunday enters the final lap, most of the smart political money in this Indian Ocean sugar island is on the Mouvement Militant Mauricien (MMM) of 38-year-old Paul Bérenger, a member of the white Franco-Mauritian minority, to win by a show hand. But the wisest punters are hedging their bets. For, as the wily former agriculture minister, Sir Satsam Sooleil, puts it, "today's enemy can be tomorrow's friend."

It is only 14 months since Mauritius, 720 square miles of coral-fringed volcanic rock inhabited by a racially mixed population of more than 990,000, last went to the polls and swept the left-wing MMM into power in alliance with the smaller Parti Socialiste Mauricien (PSM). The alliance won all 62 directly elected seats.

The octogenarian Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, the Hindu doctor who had led Mauritius for 14 years since independence from Britain, and had dominated the local political scene for a decade before that, failed to gain a seat.

lar measures needed to straighten out the country's parlous finances. The Prime Minister, Anerood Jugnauth, a 53-year-old Hindu who trained as a lawyer in Britain and had been president of the MMM since 1973, parted company with Mr Bérenger, the MMM's founder, and formed a new party, the Mouvement Socialiste Militant (MSM), but he did not have a clear majority and was forced to call an election.

The MSM consists of Mr Jugnauth and some other Indian defectors from the MMM, plus virtually the whole of the PSM, whose youthful leader, Harish Boodhoo, represents a populist Hindu conservatism that has developed distinctly communalist and anti-white overtones. Mr Jugnauth and Mr Boodhoo accuse Mr Bérenger of being power-hungry and of betraying the "socialist" cause for which they fought together last year.

This however, has not stopped the MSM from forming an alliance with the discredited Labour Party of Sir Seewoosagur. Mr Bérenger has his own credibility gap. He was largely responsible for the strong emphasis in last year's MMM-PSM manifesto on redistributing wealth, raising living standards and improving welfare services. But it was he, as Finance Minister, who had to announce to the public the postponement of most of these programmes because of the economic stringencies required by the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund in return for financial assistance.

At the bank's urging, Mr Bérenger reduced the controversial export duty on sugar. The sugar industry, which furnishes more than three-quarters of Mauritian foreign exchange earnings, is in real financial difficulty, but it is also controlled by the grands blancs, the white Franco-Mauritian minority. Mr Bérenger thus laid himself open to the thinly veiled racial taint of being a lackey of (white) big business.

Certainly, it is paradoxical that Mr Bérenger, the radical firebrand who learnt his politics on the student barricades in Paris in 1968, built his political career in Mauritius on trade union organization, and was even imprisoned for a year in the early 1970s, is now privately the preferred candidate of many conservative Mauritian businessmen. Mauritius's foreign creditors also see him as the man best equipped to get the economy back on the rails.

The history of Mauritius is as surprising as its politics. Uninhabited for most of recorded history, it was colonized sporadically by the Dutch in the seventeenth century and settled permanently in 1721 by the French, who imparted their culture and language on the island, established the sugar industry and introduced African slaves. Their mixed blood descendants now form the Creole population and their pidgin French dialect is the nearest thing to a lingua franca. In 1810 the French were defeated by the British, who abolished slavery and instead imported indentured labour from India. Today 69 per cent of the population are Indians (52 per cent Hindus and 17 per cent Muslims), 25 per cent Creoles and 6 per cent Franco-Mauritians and Chinese.

This racial and cultural witch's brew has developed into one of the liveliest multi-party democracies in the world. The high quality (mainly French) press is unfettered, the judiciary is independent and there are no political prisoners. It is entirely in keeping with Mauritius's record that it may now become the first country under black majority rule to elect a white prime minister.

Whichever group comes to power will have to operate for some years within the narrow limits set by the IMF and the World Bank. The island is heavily in debt, one in every four Mauritians of working age is unemployed, most of the jobs being in the 15-24 age group, and the sugar industry has been operating at a loss for several years.

In practice, there are restraints on foreign policy, too, despite the radical rhetoric of the MMM on non-alignment. Nor is anyone seriously contemplating any action that might disrupt the lucrative South African tourist trade. All the main contending parties are pledged to turn Mauritius into a republic within the Commonwealth under a non-executive president.

Michael Hornsby

Anne Sofer

Palmy days for the council counsel

It is sometimes said that the group of people that benefited most from the French Revolution were lawyers. Those who kept their heads, that is. And it seems that the same thing is happening in London in these revolutionary times.

I am astonished that the Bar Council has not mounted a campaign to save the GLC. I had expected, by now, petitions and probing questions in Parliament. Or at the very least a letter to The Times signed by 20 eminent heads of chambers.

But perhaps it is happening after all - in an appropriately discreet manner, words in the ear of ministers at the Reform Club. That must be it.

The truth is that the Bar has done tremendously well out of the GLC in the last two years - as it has out of all the new left-wing councils. Since the traumatic shock of the Law Lords' decision on London Transport in late 1981, the evolving attitude of the left towards the law has been fascinating to watch. Tempted at first to rail at the whole legal system as merely an arm of capitalist oppression, and the judges as pawns of a Tory government, then to indulge in futile confrontational tactics (the "Can't Pay, Won't Pay" campaign), they quickly came to realize that the law was an exciting game in which two would play. And it is fair to say that the Conservative forces that challenged the legitimacy of the fare reductions in the first place (Bromley Council et al) have only themselves to blame for this development.

In any case the GLC Labour leaders found lawyers who told them that the Law Lords' judgment did not after all mean what it said, and they could decrease fares. They found lawyers who told them they did not have to carry out the Ministry of Defence's civil defence exercises. When they had one legal opinion suggesting they would be at risk of personal surcharge if they did not put up the price of school meals, they had little difficulty in finding another to say they could perfectly legitimately keep it where it was.

They have even (and here's an irony for the party of the free unionism) got legal advice on how to act unilaterally in imposing decisions on their own staff association.

The law on local authority powers and discretion is based on the anachronistic assumption that there is a consensus among all thinking men and women about what is "reasonable". Councillors are obliged by law to act in a way that is not unreasonable. The leading legal definition of this term is Lord Green's judgment in the celebrated "Wednesbury Corporation" case of 1947. This dictum, though it is always quoted with veneration, is not much help, being entirely opaque and tautologous. It reads, inter alia: "Unreasonable" is a general description of what must not be done."

What happy days of noblesse oblige when everybody in power could agree on what was done and not done. And indeed it lasted a surprisingly long time. During the nine years I have been in local government, the first seven were spent in the innocent belief that I was elected to take decisions on the basis of my own judgment, and I never thought of taking legal advice. What thin years these must have been for the local government bar.

All that is changed. With consensus gone, with challenges to the status quo mounting in volume and bitterness from all sides, we do not feel safe even to open our mouths, let alone raise our hands to vote, without a council's opinion - and usually two or three.

But of course, since the law depends on a decision of the most subjective of terms (not only "reasonable" but "proper" and "relevant"), it is not too difficult to find lawyers to suit political taste. Barristers are people too, after all, and the range of their political beliefs stretches from the crusty old reactionaries on the right whose view of civic responsibilities goes back to the post-war law and the workhouse, to those trendy left transvestites of the Temple (wig and gown and learned friend by day, denim and CND badge and comradely by night) whose vision is of the new collectivist dawn. (For some of the latter the growth in local government work has brought not only liberty but liberation: they have been enabled to "come out" and are now sometimes seen around County Hall wearing their evening rig in daylight.)

One of the ironies of the present situation is that it seems to be proving a favourite maxim of the Prime Minister: that private enterprise always performs better than the state. The freelance barristers we employ always seem to outwit the parliamentary draftsmen. Indeed, maybe the Bar will do even better out of the Government's forthcoming direct assault on local government than it has done out of the present cold war. Just as the tax lawyers always find ways of keeping their clients' money out of the clutches of the Inland Revenue, so these new magicians of the local government Bar will find loopholes through which to preserve local government's powers.

It is an old friend of mine who is both a barrister and a former distinguished leader of a local authority always used to say when contemplating some new and particularly assume piece of legislation: "Well, it all makes work for the working man to do." And so it will no doubt. With thousands on the brief.

The author is SDP member of the GLC/LEA for Camden, St Pancras, North.

مكتبة الأمل

P.O. Box 7, 200 Gray's Inn Road, London WC1X 8EZ. Telephone: 01-837 1234

THE TURKISH QUESTION

Can Turkey still stay as a Western ally when she returns to democracy again? Can she believe her allies when they agreed with her "Evenism" in her most critical days? Can Turkey rely on these countries again?

Those questions are asked in a document which, as reported in The Times last week, emanates from the sixteen Turkish political leaders of right and left who have been interned since June 2 in the disused radar station at Zincirlikuyu, near Canakkale on the Dardanelles. The authors of the document may not have intended it for publication, or at least may not have wished to be publicly associated with it. But there is no doubt that it does accurately reflect their views, and that they wished these views to be known in opinion-forming and policy-making circles in Europe and the United States.

The questions are in any case ones which such circles should be asking themselves with increasing discomfort. Up to now the prevailing tendency in the West has been to give General Evren and his regime the benefit of the doubt. They did, after all, put an end to the terrorism that was claiming twenty lives a day when they took over in September 1980, and to the parliamentary stalemate which had paralysed Turkey's political system. They allowed Mr Turgut Ozal, the monetarist guru of the incumbent government, to carry on his work of stabilising Turkey's finances and restoring her foreign credit.

Periodic military interventions to put the country back on course are hardly unprecedented in Turkey. There was one in 1969, another in 1971, both of which were followed by a fairly swift resumption of the democratic process. The generals of 1980 promised to do the same again, only to make a more thorough job of it this time.

That, to the political establishment both in Turkey itself and in the West, is what they appeared at first sight to be doing. True, in the process they arrested very large numbers of people, and there was a growing body of evidence that many of those people were tortured during interrogation. But the scale of terrorism to be dealt with seemed to justify a large number of arrests, and unhappily - torture had been by no means unknown in Turkey even under civilian government.

True, the limitations on freedom of expression seemed rather draconian, but they were widely assumed to be only a temporary aspect of martial law. True, the constitution promulgated last year seemed rather heavily weighted in favour of the executive power and against the freedom of the individual, but that was perhaps a necessary prophylactic against the excesses of the 1970s. True, the referendum held to ratify it was hardly a free and fair choice, but rather than quibble about that it was surely better to accept the result and get back to civilian rule?

Sustained by such arguments, politicians and media alike, in the West, have more or less consciously applied a lower standard to the regime's performance on human and civil rights than they would to any other European country, west or east. The long drawn out trial of twenty-seven intellectuals, including a retired ambassador (brought to court shaven-headed, refused permission to go abroad for cancer treatment, and now facing a probable ten-year prison sentence) for the heinous crime of forming a "peace association", has generally received down-pat treatment. The American government seems unperturbed by the fact that the correspondent of United Press International was beaten up when he applied for a passport and has still not been given one five months later, in spite of written assurance to the contrary from the Turkish ambassador in Washington. One can imagine the reaction if a Polish journalist working for an American news agency were to be similarly treated.

Why? Because Turkey, unlike Poland, is part of the West.

Because martial law had been introduced there to save democracy, not to stamp it out. Or so we thought, and so - it is fair to say - many mainstream Turkish politicians thought until this year. But such a view is becoming less tenable.

The purge of universities this spring, directed not merely against Marxists but against even the most mildly left-leaning liberals, was hardly the act of a regime intending to restore democracy in any meaningful sense. Even so, the authorisation of political parties in April, in preparation for the elections due in November, seemed to offer a chance for free debate to resume.

The real moment of truth came on May 31, when the regime banned the first of the new parties that seemed likely to win substantial popular support and ordered the detention of Mr Sileyman Demirel, the oft-reflected conservative prime minister of the past two decades, along with thirteen other former politicians and two of the new party's would-be founders. Since then it has vetoed personalities to prevent other potentially popular parties, of both left and right, from reaching the quota of thirty founding members which it has itself fixed. The deadline for formation of parties is now fast approaching and it is clear that only those whose leaders have been hand-picked by the generals will be allowed to qualify. Even they will have to submit their lists of candidates to a further veto.

Democracy means allowing the people to make their own choices - which, it now appears, is precisely what Turkey's generals are unwilling to do. In these circumstances it will be difficult for the rest of the world to accept the government that emerges from the elections (if they are held) as genuinely representative of the Turkish people. It looks as though what is planned is not, after all, the restoration of democracy but the legitimisation of continued military rule.

RUSSIA'S GEORGIAN FRIENDS

Nationalist demonstrations in the Soviet republic of Georgia are disrupting the authorities' efforts to mark the bicentenary of the Treaty of Georgievsk which in August 1783 placed Eastern Georgia under Russian protectorate. Explaining why, in this age of decolonization, the country incorporated into the Russian empire are still ruled by the Russian capital presents a major problem for the Soviet leadership, which generally tries to portray such an anniversary as a "manifestation of friendship" between the Russian people and the minority nation. The minorities are told that their historic ties with Russia, raised to a new level by the 1917 Revolution, have assured them a higher degree of civilization than they could have achieved independently. There is some truth in this claim, but it is not an argument which now receives much support in an international forum such as the United Nations, nor is it accepted by nationalists in the USSR.

Last month about a hundred people demonstrated in Tbilisi, the Georgian capital, demanding the release of two young nationalists arrested for circulating leaflets calling for a boycott of the official anniversary celebrations; they argued that the treaty became "the basis for the annexation of Georgia". Five demonstrators were arrested and a further twenty were detained but later released after police interrogation. Various illegal journals are circulating clandestinely in the republic; in Sakartvelo, for example, several prominent Georgian historians are cited to refute the Soviet propaganda line on the 1783 treaty. Recently a young history student, David Berdzenishvili, was arrested and charged with editing the unofficial journal Samrelo (The Bell Tower) which is described as the "organ of the Republican Party of Georgia".

Georgian civilization in fact has much deeper historical roots than that of the Russian people. A Georgian kingdom is recorded in the third century B.C. and Georgia has been Christian since 337 A.D. The Georgian alphabet is unique and predates Cyrillic by centuries; the earliest preserved Georgian writing dates back to the fifth century. The Christian Russians to the north seemed natural protectors for the Georgians who were repeatedly under attack from the Turks and Persians in the south but protection came at the cost of annexation by the expanding Russian Empire. In May 1920 the hard-pressed Soviet government signed a treaty recognizing Georgian independence and sovereignty, but ten months later the Red Army occupied the independent state and established Bolshevik rule. Georgia's famous son Joseph Dzhughashvili

- better known as Stalin - had no sympathy for "bourgeois nationalism" in his homeland. Georgians joke that in a fair exchange "the Russians gave us communism; we gave them Stalin".

The republic's main Russian-language newspaper Zarya Vostoka is running regular features on the bicentenary as a "remarkable festival of friendship and fraternity". It recently reported that the aim was "the active propaganda of the wise Leninist nationality policy of the party, the educating of workers in a spirit of devotion to the ideas of eternal friendship between the Georgian and Russian peoples". But it is an uphill struggle; the evidence of nationalist discontent persists. In 1977 Vladimir Zhvaniya was sentenced to death for bomb attacks on public buildings. In 1978, after demonstrations in Tbilisi, the authorities agreed to confirm Georgian as the republic's official language in the new constitution. Students of Tbilisi University have frequently demonstrated in defence of their national heritage. In 1981 about a thousand students successfully demanded the reinstatement of a professor dismissed for his ideologically suspect lectures on Georgian literature. Further demonstrations and protests seem likely before the official celebrations reach their peak in October.

THE WATCHERS ON THE LOCH

It is difficult to be neutral about the Loch Ness Monster. Like the virtues and attributes of Mrs Margaret Thatcher, Mr Tony Benn or Miss Koo Stark, people of all sorts and conditions tend to express firmish views on the subject. In at least one household the beast is lumped with the Abominable Snowman and God by inquisitive children as a test of their parents' propensity for faith. It can be difficult explaining to a four-year-old that the Almighty is in a rather different league from the other two.

Of the three, despite the efforts of the World Council of Churches in Vancouver, the Monster attracted the most headlines last week. Loch Ness, it seems, is humming with electronic gadgetry as hammers try, fifty years since the first sighting by Mrs Mackay of Drumnaadrochit, to snatch data, photographic and/or sonic, which will prove beyond all doubt that the creature exists. Though heavy sceptics will not be convinced until it is captured alive or in carcass form.

Last week's pictures of the vessel "The New Atlantis" plying the deep, mysterious waters in the shadow of Urquhart Castle - the photogenic setting of so many sightings - was, in a strange way, depressing. New technology versus the prehistoric seems a bit unfair. Unlike a nuclear powered submarine the Monster cannot take countermeasures, short of rearing up suddenly and paralyzing the ship's skipper with fright or overturning the boat altogether.

On a deeper level, too, it was disturbing. After the initial stage of curiosity had abated, would it not seem tragic if the beast's existence was proven, particularly if it was brought into captivity? The poetry would drain from Loch Ness. There would be a sense of loss, of mystery and magic punctured, like the replacement of steam locomotives by diesels or the Latin Mass by the vernacular.

There is, of course, a school of thought which treats the whole monster affair as an early and immensely successful job creation scheme invented in 1933 by an enterprising journalist on the Inverness Courier. If true, it would be a pity if that play was rumbled as well. May the watchers on the loch have a happy holiday. May they take some good holiday snaps. More shots of that head and neck and those marvellous humps would be most welcome. But, most of all, may their success be partial.

Implications of green belt guidance

From Mr Sydney Chapman, MP for Chipping Barnet (Conservative)

Sir, Your leader on green belt policy (August 8) puts the recent Government draft circular in its proper and wider context. As you rightly judge, the circular has caused consternation to at least one MP representing part of an outer London borough containing a substantial wedge of green belt.

The draft circular is vague if not contradictory. If the final circular issued is not materially altered, will, I fear, cause totally different interpretations to be put upon it by the public, local planning authorities and potential developers.

For example, paragraph 11 of the draft circular states: "... the Government continue to attach great importance to the use of green belts to contain the sprawl of built-up areas and to safeguard the neighbouring countryside from encroachment..." This is a fair summary of the definition and purpose of green belts.

Yet two paragraphs later the assertion is made that "... if green belts are drawn excessively tightly around built-up areas it may not be possible to maintain the degree of permanence that (they) should have..."

Surely, if the policy is to be effective, their boundaries should be drawn tightly around built-up areas on the fringes of the metropolitan (and other) green belts?

As I interpret the draft circular, the danger is that it has encouraged owners and agents to apply for planning permission on any suitable site fit for development and make it more difficult for authorities to resist. It is relevant to add here that interested third parties cannot appeal against any planning permission granted.

It may be that there are certain sites in designated or interim green belts which are detached from the principal open space rings, surrounded by built-up areas and unneeded and unsightly. Such sites might be better developed for housing, but they must be relatively few and far between.

I suggest local councils should identify such sites and invite public comment on them before releasing them, if appropriate, for development. Otherwise, the final circular should be confined to stressing the success of green belts over the past four decades and the continuing need for authorities to be vigilant in protecting them from encroaching suburbs.

This is particularly necessary at a time when thousands of acres of land in the metropolis and other conurbations lie unused, under-used or derelict; and especially when London's first orbital motorway will be completed in three years with the consequent pressure for development all around it intensified.

Yours faithfully,
SYDNEY CHAPMAN,
House of Commons.

From Mr R. W. G. Smith

Sir, One peg of the latest demand by the housebuilders for the release of green belt land for housing is that land of "little amenity value", for example run-down sites, should be freed for building.

Parts of London's green belt are undoubtedly of much less scenic value than others, but that does not mean that they should be released for housing. The green belt is there to prevent expansion of towns and the walling up of countryside by building, and the scenic quality of the land is irrelevant.

It suits the development interests to pretend that the less attractive land might as well be built upon, but that misrepresentation of the nature of the green belt ought not to go unchallenged. The tragedy is that the Secretary of State for the Environment and some newspapers look like falling for the trick.

People living near run-down green belt sites attach great importance to them if it is all that they have to prevent the spread of the Great Wen. To sacrifice green belt to mollify (temporarily) the vociferous and greedy building industry would be extremely short-sighted and a tragedy for future generations.

Unsuitable sites can be rendered attractive and useful without surrendering them to builders. Surely it is not beyond our ingenuity to do that, and to meet any genuine housing needs elsewhere.

Yours faithfully,
R. W. G. SMITH, Chairman,
The London Green Belt Council,
111 Billy Lows Lane,
Potters Bar, Hertfordshire.

Dissident's sentence

From Miss Mary Kernick and others

Sir, We wish to draw attention to, and protest most strongly against, the sentence of 14 months imprisonment followed by three years' house arrest imposed on Ladislav Lis, the Czech dissident whose imminent trial was mentioned in your newspaper on July 20.

Dr Lis was until recently spokesman for the Charter 77 Group, a member of VONS (the Committee for the Defence of the Unjustly Prosecuted) and a fearless campaigner for human rights in Czechoslovakia. We believe he is being persecuted purely and simply for his dissenting political views and continued association with Charter 77 - in fact one of the charges was "incitement against the socialist system".

He has been in and out of prison since 1977 and his medical condition, never good, is now parlous. He is reported to be coughing blood and suffering from a swelling on the left side of the chest, for which appropriate medication is denied. He and his family have been subjected to constant harassment and police surveillance, and his wife is not receiving letters or allowed to visit him.

We believe that international publicity and pressure are an essential part of Amnesty's continuing campaign to secure the release of Dr Lis.

Yours faithfully,
MARY KERNICK,
FRAN DOBSON,
FRAN DOBSON,
CLIVE SOLEY,
Camden Amnesties,
37 Hillmorton Road, N7.

Parental consent

From Mr Peter Schofield

Sir, Your correspondent Mrs Carole Chapman (August 5) appears to be under a misapprehension.

Your 16 to 18 year-old, whose parents misguidedly wish to obstruct a "wish to enter a stable, loving sexual relationship through marriage", has access to the courts, who in appropriate cases can and will give consent in the place of the parents.

Yours faithfully,
PETER J. SCHOFIELD,
Faculty of Law,
University of Leeds,
Leeds,
August 5.

Curtain up

From Mr Arnold M. Crook and Mr Anthony Peek

Sir, We at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, take great exception to Sir Roy Strong's article of July 30. His reference to "that most elegant but now sadly run-down theatre" is completely misrepresents how the theatre looks and the public sees it. It is he aware of the political and economic gulf which exists between the subsidised and unsubsidised sectors of theatre?

In April, 1980, the licence fee imposed on the Haymarket by the GLC rose from £75 to £1,350 (this applied to all theatres). Since that date the licence fee has increased annually to £1,866. The fee, being based on seating capacity, means that some theatres of larger capacity instead of paying £75 as hitherto, are now paying £4,368; however, subsidised companies as registered charities pay only a nominal fee of £30. Additionally, whereas the rates paid by theatres and others are in the five-figure category, those in the subsidised area are considerably less, as also are their rents.

The Haymarket is a class I listed building and, in company with all other occupiers of listed buildings, has as a result its cross to bear with its additional burdensome expenses.

Although we are unable to predict what may happen in the future (it may well be the title, "Curtains for our theatre heritage", is applicable), we look to it with more realism and enthusiasm than does Sir Roy.

Rather than complain one should be more positive in helping theatre. We in the Theatre Royal, Brighton and its colleagues are pursuing with tireless vigour all avenues in an effort to improve its lot. Alas, in the corridors of power little attention is, at this moment, being paid to our pleas by those who could alleviate our position. People running theatres are dedicated and skilled professionals doing a difficult job very well indeed and it is support they require, not criticism.

Finally, in reviewing A Patriot For Me with Mr Alan Bates, which opened here on August 8 to an extremely high level of advance bookings, Mr Jack Tinker referred to the Haymarket as "this palace of establishment theatre".

This group has four of the most beautiful theatres in England, the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, the Strand, the Theatre Royal, Brighton and Richmond Theatre and categorically none of them are "sadly run down".

ARNOLD M. CROOK, Chairman,
ANTHONY PEEK, Managing Director,
Theatre Royal, Haymarket, SW1
August 10.

Yugoslavia's economy

From Mr Kurt Weisskopf

Sir, Your leader, Yugoslavia takes its medicine (August 3) does the efforts of that country credit, but not fully so. The stabilisation programme prepared by the so-called Kraiger Commission was initiated early in 1982. Between that date, when this economic brains trust issued basic guidelines for long-term stabilisation, and July, 1983, when it published its long-term stabilisation programme, now approved by the Federal Assembly, it released 15 studies dealing with the principal aspects of Yugoslavia's economy.

If there is a common factor it has been the reiterated insistence on restraint as well as on the inviolability of self-management despite its imperfections. Economically Yugoslavia remains a consensus society. If any evidence is needed it is in the fact that for the last three years its people have accepted unprotestingly a decline in their standard of living ranging between five and six per cent annually. You might argue that there has been unrest in Kosovo, but that situation could be likened to Ulster - there is more than one analogy.

There may have been over-investment, but had it not been for the oil crisis Yugoslavia would have managed with little foreign aid or perhaps even with none. But as the OECD Economic Survey on Yugoslavia, published on July 7, puts it, although Yugoslavia's problems remain "formidable" its authorities "are showing a remarkable resolve to achieve the stabilisation objectives by imposing sacrifices in real incomes and consumption for the third successive year and reducing the level of investment..." But, once again, the sacrifices have not been decreed. They are a result of persuasion and consensus.

Please allow me to correct your data on the level of unemployment

Alternative routes in quest for health

From Dr Richard D. Tonkin

Sir, Ruth West and Brian Inglis are right in the main substance of their arguments (August 8,9,10) for increased recognition of various different therapeutic techniques in the management of health and recovery from illness. But surely the greatest benefit to the greatest number of people lies in co-operation between conventional and what is more accurately termed complementary medicine.

To foster the false concept of orthodox scientific medicine as outdated and hazardous is highly dangerous. Scientific and complementary practices both have an important part to play in the health care of the public.

We agree that many of today's patients suffer from an imbalance of body function (disturbed homeostasis) which is closely related to personal and environmental factors. We also agree that many complementary therapies are eminently suitable for dealing with such dis-ease.

However, orthodox medicine still carries the responsibility for screening out a large number of organic conditions for which some direct action is more appropriate and without which serious complications and/or long term disability may result.

Finally, we must not lose sight of the fact that around half of all cases of cancer can now be successfully eliminated as a result of intensive research and the use of new technology and although the patient's own self healing capability is unquestionably of primary importance, it needs all the help it can get from these recent scientific discoveries.

Sincerely yours,
RICHARD D. TONKIN, Chairman,
Research Council for Complementary Medicine,
37 Bedford Square, WC1.

From Mr R. G. Williams

Sir, The editorial, "Physician, heal thyself" (August 10) is a good example of scientism - that is to say the dressing up of a subject in the terms of science but containing very little of the actual content of science. In this particular sample the scientific approach has taken the form of the rejection of scientific method with a simultaneous appeal to science in the form of "the world of pure science".

The confused thought is instanced by the phrase "... and prefer to believe that all physical states can be examined and explained objectively". A physical state obviously can be measured or examined, since that is the defining quality of a physical state. Equally, a physical state can be explained objectively.

Labour leadership

From Mr Jeff Rooker, MP for Birmingham, Ferry Bar (Labour)

Sir, Alan Sapper ("More like a nightmare ticket" - feature, August 11) presumes too much. How does he know that the Labour Party annual conference will vote year in year out the same way on each and every policy issue - for that is the only basis that he can write as he does about a Labour leadership team "in line" and "in tune" with annual conference.

He glosses over in his last sentence the key point that the new leader will not be able to "carry out" any policies until he becomes Prime Minister. This is not an unimportant point.

He cites "a recent opinion poll" (unnamed) which gave a majority for increased taxation to be spent on improving social services as evidence that our policies were not understood. However, the 1979 British Election Study showed how fragile the support is on this point.

Seventy-one per cent were in favour of the statement that "government services such as health, education and welfare should be kept up even if it means that taxes cannot be reduced", whereas 71 per cent also agreed that "social services and benefits should be cut back". The divisive contest of 1981 and its aftermath made it impossible to begin the task of selling a policy which would be believed on this one issue he cites.

There is not a shred of evidence that either Roy Hattersley or Neil Kinnock wish to be surrounded by "yes men"; indeed the opposite is the case. Leading the Labour Party to victory in the next general election is a somewhat different task than running a trade union. It's about time trade union leaders woke up to this.

Yours,
JEFF ROOKER,
House of Commons, SW1
August 11.

Objectivity is the whole basis of science.

Science is a discipline - i.e. the method is subject to rules. It is conformity to rules or lack of conformity that determines whether a statement is scientific or not. The editorial claims that "there are many disciplines at work in the world of alternative medicine". What rules are there in the world of alternative medicine?

The most irrational part of your editorial is contained in its last sentence which reads: "However, even the Hippocratic Oath recognised that, in certain callings, spiritual quality is as basic as skill." The reference to the Hippocratic Oath puts the context of "certain callings" as medical, and presumably the words "as basic as" means equally important. The writer then might find a surgeon with great spiritual gifts but little in the way of surgical skill appropriate for him when it came to operative surgery.

On the other hand, perhaps the ending of your editorial is just a flourish - a piece of hyperbole not intended to be taken seriously - which raises the question whether the rest of the judgments expressed should be taken seriously?

Yours truly,
R. G. WILLIAMS,
The New Hall,
Hedon,
North Humberside,
August 10.

From Dr J. P. Taverner

Sir, Your leading article today, together with the week's series on holistic medicine gives rise to the erroneous impression that many doctors, especially GPs, have been "psyched" by their peers into over-prescribing and treating all patients' ailments with medications.

"The pill for every ill" ethic was a post-war product of the politicians' welfare state combined with pressures from the pharmaceutical industry. This political, commercial and social influence has had an insidious effect on our patients. They now expect and sometimes demand treatment for their illness today, and not tomorrow.

Many doctors believe and have always believed in the holistic theory as applied to health, yet it requires time and effort on the part of the patient to put this into practice. Many prefer to have quick palliation with a pill rather than a slower yet rewarding cure through their own inner resources.

Yours faithfully,
JOHN TAVERNER,
1500 Warwick Road,
Knowle,
Salford for the deceased's medals.
West Midlands,
August 10.

The treasure-seekers

From Major J. D. Sainsbury

Sir, What are the bounds of treasure seeking? This trust, running on a shoestring to preserve the near-200 year history of a county Territorial unit, is beset with a new menace, every bit as threatening as the metal detector.

He is the medal speculator who, spurred by the "investment value" of medals, reads the obituary columns of local newspapers for evidence of war or other Service and includes upon next of kin to make offers for the deceased's medals.

The tasteless intrusion has to our knowledge been compounded either by the statement that "the regimental museum would not be interested" in a certain group of medals or, worse, by the speculator purporting to be acting on behalf of the regimental museum.

Heritage does not only encompass "buried" archaeology and the full extent of its rape should be realised by anyone trying to protect it.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,
J. D. SAINSBURY,
Hertfordshire Yeomanry and Artillery Historical Trust,
8 Mornington,
Digswell,
Welwyn, Hertfordshire,
August 2.

Without honour

From Mr R. J. Lane Fox

Sir, Mr M. B. Lacey (August 8) fears an earthquake in Winchester Cathedral because there were only five candidates from New College in Oxford's class list for Greats this year, none of them a Wykehamist, two of them women, while neither a Wykehamist nor a New College candidate was among the firsts.

As one of the New College candidates' tutors, I must reassure the residents in Winchester. Mr Lacey has miscounted. The six New College candidates are first-rate people, a more valuable category than first-class examinees. Two other candidates took degrees in classical subjects, one of whom is male, the other female. Both are first-rate and first-class.

Mr Lacey's expectations of Winchester College are not mine. His view of women is his own misfortune. Yours truly,
R. J. LANE FOX,
New College,
Oxford.

Relatively speaking

From Bishop E. L. Evans

Sir, No doubt our American friends would agree with Mr Bristow's letter (August 8).

Their usual opening gambit is: "Who is this, please?", to which I have always thought that the correct reply is: "I don't know; perhaps you will tell me."

Yours faithfully,
E. L. EVANS,
Bunglow 1,
Terry's Cross,
Brighton Road,
Henfield,
West Sussex.

سكنا من الأصل

Investment and Finance

City Editor Anthony Hilton

THE TIMES City Office 200 Gray's Inn Road London WC1X 8EZ Telephone 01-837 1234

STOCK EXCHANGES

FT Index 722.1 FT All Shares 456.53 Bargains 20,028 Datastream USM Leaders Index 100.82 New York Dow Jones Average 1182.83 Tokyo Stock Exchange Index 8,520.72 Hongkong Hang Seng Index 1,037.46 Amsterdam 150.1 Sydney AO Index 661.7 Frankfurt Commerzbank Index 844.40 Brussels General Index 130.01 Paris CAC Index 131.2 Zurich SCA General 294.0 (Friday's close)

CURRENCIES

LONDON Sterling $1.4835 DM 2.3100 DM 4.0375 FF 12.1400 Yen 366.25 Dollar Index 130.4 DM 2.7220 NEW YORK Sterling $1.4902 INTERNATIONAL ECU 20.563547 SDU 20.703928 (Friday's close)

BOARD MEETINGS

TODAY - Interim: Albright and Wilson, ASEA AB, Ayrshire Metal Products, British Drilling International, British Petroleum Co of Jersey, Scottish Eastern Investment, Thomas Nationwide Transport (third quarter), Transport Development. Finalists: Howard Shuttering, Impala Plastics, Vibroprint. TOMORROW - Interim: Adams and Gibson, Anglo-International Investment, Metal Bulletin, Royal Insurance, Unilever (second quarter). Finalists: Cowan, De Groot, Group Investors, Heilmann Holdings, Metal Trade Suppliers, Restmor Group. WEDNESDAY - Interim: T Clarke, Gaskell Broadloom, Gianfield Lawrence, Horizon Travel, Phoenix. Finalists: ML Holdings, Scottish, English and European Textiles, Victor Engineering. THURSDAY - Interim: Anglo American Industrial Corp, Corah, Hill & Smith, Johnson Group Cleaners, Philips Lamps (second quarter), Squirrel Horn, Stenhouse Holdings, Westminster Property (amended). Finalists: Copelin, EID-Parry (India) (18-month figures), A & J Geffer, McKay Securities Group, Louis Newmark. FRIDAY - Interim: Charles Baynes, Benford Concrete Machinery, GT Asia (Sterling) Fund (quarterly). Finalists: WG Allen & Sons (Tipton), Mining Supplies, Pfitz, Press Tolls, Waring & Gillow, and Wholesale Fittings.

ANNUAL MEETINGS

Today - Group Lotus Car Companies, Lotus Cars, Hethel, Norwich (12.15), Steinberg Group, Steinberg House, Killy Farm, Milton Keynes (11.00). Tomorrow - Evans of Leeds, Queens Hotel, City Square, Leeds (noon); Intasun, Leisure Group, Howard Hotel, Temple Place, WC2 (11.30). Wednesday - Bulgin Group of Companies, Bypass Road, Barking, Essex; Charles Hill, Park Hall Hotel, Goldhorn Park, Woburnhampton (noon); Mountview Estates, Regent Palace Hotel, Piccadilly Circus, W1 (noon); Unilock Holdings, Institute of Chartered Accountants, Moorpace Place, EC2 (3.00). Thursday - A. Cohen & Co, 8 Waterloo Place, St James's, SW1 (noon); Greene, King & Sons, The Barn, Houghton Park, Houghton, N. Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk (noon); Philips Patents (Holdings), Grand Hotel, Aytoun Street, Manchester (noon); Scottish & Newcastle Breweries, King James Theatre Hotel, St James Centre, Edinburgh (noon). Friday - Ariel Industries, Allan House, Newark Street, Leicester (4.00); Chamberlain Phipps, The Manor House, Higham Ferrers, Northamptonshire (2.30); May & Hassell, Grand Hotel, Broad Street, Bristol (noon).

● Rate rise forecast: Interest rates will have to rise in order to reduce the growth in money supply, according to a forecast published today by the Charterhouse Investment and Banking Group. But the higher rates will keep the pound overvalued, restrict industrial recovery and mean a continued rise in unemployment, it adds. ● Beazer contracts: C. H. Beazer (Holdings) has secured two contracts for its security and defence subsidiary, one worth £850,000 to supply bullet-proof doors and fittings for a Hongkong bank and the other to equip an Italian warship with a glass fibre bow dome. ● Hongkong growth: Hongkong's gross domestic product growth is likely to exceed the government's February estimate of 4 per cent in calendar 1983, according to the Colony's Financial Secretary, Mr John Brembridge.

Savings bank chief overcomes opposition in regions TSB unveils merger plan paving way for £400m public flotation

By Our Financial Staff TSB, a TSB for Northern Ireland; a Channel Islands bank; United Dominions Trust, the hire-purchase division; and an insurance company. This week's merger takes place under existing legislation, but it is seen as a significant breakthrough by the TSB chairman, Sir John Road, who was brought in to mastermind the sale of the bank. The planned flotation aroused considerable opposition among the more traditional banks in the movement, many of which felt that they should stick to their traditional role. The Road plan, in contrast, envisages the creation of a

Read: Significant breakthrough towards masterminding sale nationwide unit which will rival Barclays, Midland, National Westminster and Lloyds in the high streets and also possibly in the international banking field.

Commonwealth call for trade reforms

By Peter Wilson-Smith Banking Correspondent Commonwealth finance ministers will discuss a new report calling for important reforms of the international financial and trading system at their annual meeting in Trinidad next month. The report is the work of a nine-member task force set up by the Commonwealth Secretariat after last year's meeting of Commonwealth finance ministers in London. At the meeting, Mr Robert Muldoon, the New Zealand premier, pushed the idea of an international monetary conference along the lines of the Bretton Woods meeting of 1944. His proposals have since received backing from others, including President Francois Mitterrand of France. The new report is likely to set the tone of debate on reforms to the system at the International Monetary Fund World Bank conference which immediately follows the finance ministers' meeting. The new plan calls for greater economic cooperation and

Tilling Man tipped as Rank chief

Sir Patrick Meany, the former chairman of Thomas Tilling which was taken over this year by BTR, is tipped as the next chairman of Rank Organisation. Last month, Mr Michael Gifford, finance director of Cadbury Schweppes, was appointed Rank's chief executive and it was known that the group was looking for a new chairman. Sir Patrick who is 58, has spearheaded Rank's search for a new chief executive with his fellow Rank non-executive directors. Yesterday, Mr Russell Evans, Rank's chairman, said that he had no comment to make as he had been on holiday. "I understand that Sir Patrick Meany is also away at the moment", he added. Sir Patrick's experience of running a conglomerate would fit in well at Rank with its diverse interests. He is also on the boards of Cable and Wireless, ICI, and Midland Bank.

Bad debts threat 'ignored'

By Our Financial Staff Banks specialising in Latin America remain by far the most profitable of the consortium banks, according to a survey by IBCA Banking Analysis. However, IBCA questions whether these banks have made sufficient provision for bad debts. It accuses the accountancy profession of having faced this tricky problem by "resolutely ignoring it". European Brazilian Bank and Libra Bank emerge as the most profitable of the 44 consortia

Hull contract crucial to System X future

By Bill Johnstone, Electronics Correspondent The designers of the British electronic digital exchange, System X, are fighting to secure a crucial contract worth about £20m over 10 years in an attempt to prove to the telecommunications world that the technology is commercially viable. They will face stiff competition for the contract, which will be awarded within the next two months by Hull City Council, the only operator of a public telephone system in Britain apart from British Telecom. The contract is a prestigious one and vital to System X, because the exchange has yet to demonstrate that it can compete effectively in the open market against international competition. More than £150m has been spent on System X's development. Some estimates put the figure at £300m. But although its designers claim a technical superiority for it, the exchange has been embarrassingly slow in establishing a foothold in overseas markets. Recent attempts by designers

'Wings' bond warrant launched

By Michael Prest "Wings" - warrants in negotiable government securities - took off in the Eurobond market last week. These are another ingenious attempt to separate investors from their money by offering warrants convertible into United States Treasury bonds. The warrants are issued by investment banks and securities houses and are negotiable instruments in bearer form, thus preserving the Eurobond market's traditional anonymity. After a year the warrants lapse and are worthless, but at any stage in their brief life they are exercisable into specified US Treasury bonds. No coupon is attached to the warrants. If the price of the related bond rises, the price of the warrant should go up as well and, in theory, the happy investor makes a profit. Since the warrants are issued at a fraction of the price of the

Group Lotus row averted

By Rosemary Unsworth Group Lotus shareholders will vote today on the £6.7m rescue of their sports car company by British Car Auction Group and Toyota, the Japanese car group. But threats of a boardroom row taking place at the meeting between Mr Fred Bushell, Lotus chairman, and Mr David Wickins, BCA's chairman, over the calculation of the group's profits, announced last Friday, have receded. Mr Bushell said yesterday that he was discussing a three-year contract with Group Lotus. It emerged over the weekend that Mr Wickins and a co-director, Mr Alan Curtis, had not seen the group's interim results showing a £109,000 profit compared with a £289,000 loss for the same period last year before they were issued to the press and Mr Wickins was worried about taking responsibility for the figures.

Car component firms in danger, survey says Sector's horrific decline

By Edward Townsend, Industrial Correspondent The performance of Britain's motor-vehicle component industry has been "horrific" and has mirrored, if not led, the country's industrial decline, according to a hard-hitting report on the sector published today. The Inter-Company Comparisons survey shows that the industry, usually regarded as the one bright spot in the depressed motor industry, "actually lost money" on over £2,000m of sales in 1981-82. The report, published in the midst of the controversial bid for AE by GKN, covers the performance of 100 companies over the three years up to April last year and concludes that almost half made losses in the last year. "In fact, the losses run up by some companies in the past two years must raise questions as to their survival." The industry has cut its labour force in recent years by as much as 40 per cent and has instituted widespread factory closures. The ICC report shows that 42 companies shed 30,000 jobs in the three years, a drop of 18 per cent to a total labour force of 143,800. Much of the industry's problems stem from the huge increase in imported vehicles, a factor which ICC says has been beyond the control of the parts makers. It adds: "It is far too easy to say that a reduction of capacity earlier, or diversification into other markets and products, should have taken place sooner, but the truth of the matter is that many companies did this and yet they still made losses." "The industry has reduced in size through cutting out spare capacity and labour, both direct and indirect, but if the demand is not forthcoming then many companies may not be able to survive for very much longer." Of the industry's top nine members - those with sales of more than £100m - five failed to show any growth in sales during the three years while only two, AE and Smiths Industries, achieved respectable rises of 10 per cent and 14 per cent respectively. Four companies made losses in the latest of the three years - Lucas, Chloride, Automotive Products and Quinton Hazell. Only one, Smiths, made "what could be considered reasonable margins." ICC says that Smiths has kept profits hovering around the £25m-£26m mark in recent years "through a combination of good management and diversifying into other industries." Meanwhile, another motor industry report published today describes Europe as a "prime example" of an area where resistance to Japanese car imports is "disorganised and full of holes." The report, from Automotive Industry Data, says the fact that members of the European Community have different industrial policies was instrumental in damaging the vehicle industry. Most European countries imposed restrictions on the Japanese but the Japanese responded by expanding their European share through fringes markets such as Scandinavia and the Low Countries. "The net result is that European vehicle manufacturers, blind to the dangers, are losing valuable market share in what are to them traditional export markets." Motor Component & Accessory Manufacturers, ICC, Business Radio, 22-42 Baines Street, London, EC1Y 8QE, £121. Japanese Motor Vehicle Exports Strategies and Intentions, Automotive Industry Data, 34 St John Street, Lichfield, Staffs WS13 6PB, £25.

individual banks - they are thought to be owned ultimately by the depositors - the £400m raised by the float may well be retained by the bank and used to finance new ventures. There is concern, however, that a capital windfall of this nature may lead the TSB into areas where it has no experience. The capital will also help the TSB finance expensive developments in banking, such as the computerized point-of-sale system where a terminal in a department store deducts the amount of a purchase directly from the customer's bank account. And it will allow it to finance the further rationalization of its branch banking network.

Group Lotus row averted

By Rosemary Unsworth Group Lotus shareholders will vote today on the £6.7m rescue of their sports car company by British Car Auction Group and Toyota, the Japanese car group. But threats of a boardroom row taking place at the meeting between Mr Fred Bushell, Lotus chairman, and Mr David Wickins, BCA's chairman, over the calculation of the group's profits, announced last Friday, have receded. Mr Bushell said yesterday that he was discussing a three-year contract with Group Lotus. It emerged over the weekend that Mr Wickins and a co-director, Mr Alan Curtis, had not seen the group's interim results showing a £109,000 profit compared with a £289,000 loss for the same period last year before they were issued to the press and Mr Wickins was worried about taking responsibility for the figures.

City Editor's Comment UBM board has option on honour

The announcement that directors of UBM, the builders' merchant, ratified a share option scheme at a board meeting five days before a much-rumoured bid for the group emerged, has raised a number of eyebrows. These directors are now sitting on a paper profit of £389,000. The share option scheme was drawn up in May, presented to shareholders in June, then approved at the annual meeting on July 7. In line with the normal procedures, the allocations of options on 961,000 shares were decided at the next board meeting after the annual meeting on July 29 and the option price was set in line with the then market price of 81p. The four directors involved accepted the option offer in the next few days and the scheme was ratified on August 5. It was five days later that Norcros unveiled its 109p-a-share takeover bid and stock market speculation pushed UBM shares sharply higher on hopes of a counter-bid. They now stand at 121.5p. However, the unfortunate aspect to this affair is that the stock market already appeared to have a good idea a bid was on the way. Speculation in the market On August 4, for instance, the day before the UBM board allocated the options, The Times reported: "Talk of a bid of 110p a share sent shares of builders' merchant UBM group racing away 6p to equal the year's high of 99p yesterday." The previous day UBM shares had risen 5p. The Times report suggested Pilkington might be the predator but the question nevertheless arises whether in these circumstances UBM directors should have gone ahead with the share option scheme. This is not to suggest that the UBM directors had foreknowledge of a bid or indeed knew anything that other shareholders did not. Mr Roger Pinnington, UBM chief executive, denies any knowledge of the Norcros bid until the day it appeared and Norcros has confirmed this. Of the speculation in the market, Mr Pinnington points out that there have been takeover rumours before. Attempts to discover whether something was afoot this time yielded no evidence of unusual share buying. Firmly against Norcros bid In short, there is no reason to suppose that directors had any prior knowledge of a bid. But the point at issue is a rather different one. It is that share option schemes are meant to be offered as an incentive to management and the purpose of this one was to promote the "future prosperity" of the company by enabling executives involved to identify their interests with those of the shareholders. Should the Norcros bid succeed, it would be very hard to see how this had been achieved. Given the unfortunate timing of events, it would look more as though directors were receiving compensation of a sort and this was not the reason why shareholders approved the scheme in the first place, nor was that why the scheme was proposed. Without a bid the options are not exercisable for three years and the UBM directors would prefer it stayed that way. They have come out firmly against the Norcros bid and without a bid the controversy would go away. In the circumstances, however, the UBM directors would be best advised to waive their rights to the options until the bid battle is over. At the least shareholders should be given another chance to vote on the scheme given the changed circumstances.

Group Lotus row averted

By Rosemary Unsworth Group Lotus shareholders will vote today on the £6.7m rescue of their sports car company by British Car Auction Group and Toyota, the Japanese car group. But threats of a boardroom row taking place at the meeting between Mr Fred Bushell, Lotus chairman, and Mr David Wickins, BCA's chairman, over the calculation of the group's profits, announced last Friday, have receded. Mr Bushell said yesterday that he was discussing a three-year contract with Group Lotus. It emerged over the weekend that Mr Wickins and a co-director, Mr Alan Curtis, had not seen the group's interim results showing a £109,000 profit compared with a £289,000 loss for the same period last year before they were issued to the press and Mr Wickins was worried about taking responsibility for the figures.

STC announce a dramatic exchange of ideas. At STC Business Systems, telephone and switchboard technology has been moving apace. So has the legislation governing telecommunications, which now allows you to exchange ideas with independent suppliers. The OCS 300 is a spectacular new option offered by STC Business Systems, part of one of Europe's largest telecommunications companies. It's a compact, modular system which you can add to as your company grows. It has the capacity for 50 up to 300 telephones and offers all the features an expanding business is likely to need in the future. Write or phone David Evans on 01-3007788 at STC Business Systems for a full exchange of ideas. He could dramatically alter your thinking. STC I would like an exchange of ideas on the telephone. Please send me full details of the OCS 300 system. Name: Position held: Company: Address: Send to David Evans, STC Business Systems, Maidstone Road, Sidcup, Kent DA14 5HT. STC Business Systems. THE INTELLIGENT CHOICE.

Bespak plc - continued

(v) Extraordinary charges
The extraordinary charges in the financial year ended 30th April, 1983 represent redundancy costs and in the financial year ended 29th April, 1982 represent the cost of obtaining permission to deal in Bespak's Ordinary shares on the Unlisted Securities Market in November, 1982.

(vi) Dividends
Dividends paid by Bespak comprise:
Financial year ended: 27th April 1979, 2nd May 1980, 1st May 1981, 30th April 1982, 29th April 1983

(vii) Movements on reserves
Movements on reserves during the period have been:
Financial year ended: 27th April 1979, 2nd May 1980, 1st May 1981, 30th April 1982, 29th April 1983

(viii) Earnings per share
Earnings per share have been calculated on the 10,500,000 Ordinary shares of 10p each in issue and on the profits after taxation and before extraordinary charges for each year.

2. Statements of source and application of funds
The source and application of funds of the Group for each of the five financial years ended 29th April, 1983 were as follows:

Table showing source and application of funds for the Group from 27th April 1979 to 29th April 1983. Includes sections for source of funds and application of funds.

4. Balance sheets
The balance sheets of the Group and of Bespak at 29th April, 1983 were as follows:

Balance sheets for the Group and Bespak at 29th April 1983. Columns include Notes, The Group, and Bespak. Rows include Fixed assets, Current assets, and Liabilities.

(x) Capital commitments
The capital commitments of the Group and of Bespak at 29th April, 1983 represented:
The Group: 2200
Bespak: 2200

1. Accounting policies
(a) General
The current cost accounts have been prepared in accordance with SSAP 16, and except as stated below, under the same accounting policies as those adopted for the historical cost accounts. Current cost accounts have not been prepared for any period prior to the financial year ended 30th April, 1982. Comparative figures for the financial year ended 30th April, 1982 are shown at their original historical values without further adjustments to take account of inflation.

2. Consolidated current cost profit and loss accounts
The profit and loss accounts of the Group for the two financial years ended 30th April, 1982 and 29th April, 1983 are as follows:
Financial year ended: 30th April 1982, 29th April 1983

3. Consolidated current cost balance sheet of the Group
At 30th April 1982, At 29th April 1983
Notes: (i) Fixed assets

(ii) Current cost reserve movement
Financial year ended: 30th April 1982, 29th April 1983

(iii) Financing of current cost net operating assets
Financial year ended: 30th April 1982, 29th April 1983

(iv) Proposed dividend
The proposed dividend of 2p per share is payable on 6th October, 1983.

(v) Loan commitments
Bespak's loan commitments at 29th April, 1983 were:
Secured bank loan: 2000
Hire purchase: 1500
Total: 3500

(vi) Shares capital
The authorized share capital of Bespak at 30th April, 1982 was £1,000,000 divided into Ordinary shares of £1 each, of which 420,000 Ordinary shares were issued and fully paid.

(vii) Deferred taxation
Potential taxation liabilities, which are not expected to crystallize in the future, exist in respect of:
The Group: 2200
Bespak: 2200

(viii) Statement of Association
The Articles of Association of the Company contain provisions (inter alia) to the following effect:
(a) Subject to compliance with the provisions of the Companies Act 1948 to 1981, the Company may purchase any of its own shares and may issue shares on terms such that they are able to be redeemed.

(ix) Borrowing Powers
The Board may exercise all the powers of the Company to borrow money and to mortgage or charge its undertaking, property and uncalled capital or any part thereof and to issue debentures and other securities. The Board is to ensure that the aggregate amount of monies borrowed or secured in respect of monies borrowed or secured by the Group (excluding intra-Group borrowings) shall not at any time, without the previous sanction of the Company in General Meeting, exceed an amount equal to twice the aggregate of the amount paid up on the issued share capital of the Company and the amount of the undrawn reserves of the capital and reserves of the Company and its subsidiaries, all as shown by the latest audited consolidated balance sheet but adjusted as set out in the Articles.

2. Subsidiary and related companies
The Company has the following subsidiaries and related companies (each of which is a private company):

Table listing subsidiaries and related companies including Bertha Engineering Co. Limited, B.E.S. Technology Limited, Bespak, Inc., Winslow Engineering Limited, and R.C. Bull Rubber Co. Limited.

3. Directors' and other interests
The interests of the Directors and their families (all beneficial) in the share capital of the Company as shown by the Register maintained under the provisions of the Companies Act 1967 are as follows:
Number of shares: 175,000

4. Service Agreements
The following Service Agreements, all dated 22nd November, 1982, have been entered into by the Company:
(a) with Mr. A. Schumann, to act as Managing Director of the Company at a current salary of £20,000 per annum;

5. Articles of Association
The Articles of Association of the Company contain provisions (inter alia) to the following effect:
(a) Subject to compliance with the provisions of the Companies Act 1948 to 1981, the Company may purchase any of its own shares and may issue shares on terms such that they are able to be redeemed.

6. Taxation
The Directors have been advised that upon admission of the Ordinary shares to the Official List the Company will not be a close company within the meaning of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970.

7. Material contracts
The following contracts, not being contracts in the ordinary course of business, have been entered into within the period of two years immediately preceding the date hereof and are or may be material:
(a) dated 18th February, 1982 between J. P. Cladding-Boal (1), Mrs. M.V.M. Cladding-Boal (2), Wrightlight (3) and the Company (4), being an agreement for the subscription by the Company for 2 Ordinary Shares of £1 each of Wrightlight (5) (or, if so issued, shares of £2 each) for an aggregate consideration of £2,000;

8. Working capital
The Directors are satisfied that, taking into account the bank facilities available, the Group has sufficient working capital for its present requirements.

9. Miscellaneous
(a) No capital of the Company or (except for capital issued to or owned by the Company or a wholly-owned subsidiary) of any subsidiary has been issued, or is proposed to be issued (either for cash or for a consideration other than cash); and
(b) no commissions, discounts, brokerage or other special terms have been granted in connection with the issue or sale of any share or loan capital of the Company or of any subsidiary.

11. Documents for inspection
Copies of the following documents will be available for inspection at the offices of Norton, Rose, Birtwell & Roche, Kempson House, Cannon Street, London EC4A 3DF, during normal business hours until 12th September, 1983:
(a) the audited consolidated accounts of the Company for the financial years ended on 30th April, 1982 and 29th April, 1983;

Appendix II - Statutory and General Information

1. This Company
The Company was incorporated in England as a private company on 22nd March, 1981 under the name of Acos Industries Limited and on 20th March, 1982 changed its name to Bespak Industries Limited. The Company changed its name and was re-constituted as a public company with its present name on 11th November, 1982. Immediately prior to 22nd November, 1982 the authorized share capital of the Company was £1,000,000 divided into 1,000,000 Ordinary shares of £1 each, of which 420,000 were issued and fully paid.

Handwritten Arabic text: مكتوب من الأصل

THE TIMES 1000 1982/1983 The World's Top Companies

Stock Exchange Prices Capitalization and week's change

ACCOUNT DAYS: Dealings Begin, Today. Dealings End, Sept 2; Contango Day, Sept 5; Settlement Day, Sept 12.

(Current market price multiplied by the number of shares in issue for the stock quoted)

USM REVIEW THE TIMES BUSINESS NEWS EVERY MONDAY

Main table of stock exchange prices, capitalization, and weekly changes. Columns include Stock, Price, Chg, Gross Div, Div Yld, P/E, Capitalization, Company, and various financial metrics.

THE WEEK AHEAD

Exchange rates could trim Unilever profits

Unilever will provide the focus of attention in a quiet week for company news when it reports half-year figures tomorrow.

As the holiday season hits its peak, Horizon Travel reports its interim results on Wednesday.

Johnson Group Cleaners is expected to report interim pretax profits of about £3m on Thursday, making a full-year figure of perhaps £7m against £5.5m last time look possible.

Price increases and better volume have combined to boost margins on the dry cleaning side while the US is expected to have produced a small profit this year against losses in 1982.

Friday sees full-year results from Waring and Gillet, the furniture and carpet retailer whose shares ride a roller coaster of takeover speculation.

ECONOMIC VIEW

Looking for the M1 reaction

The reaction of financial markets to last Friday's better-than-expected US money supply figures will be keenly awaited this week.

This, in turn, could lead to some easing in the dollar's strength. After its precipitate recent rise, the dollar was already softening at the end of last week.

And a more stable or weaker dollar would certainly come as a relief to European countries which have seen their own currencies fall sharply against the dollar despite costly attempts at intervention.

Britain has so far largely escaped the impact of the dollar's remarkable recent surge and the upward trend in US rates.

Table of exchange rates for various currencies including US, UK, and others.

Table of bank and discount rates for various financial institutions.

Table of commercial and industrial data including various company performance metrics.

Educational Appointments

THE FLINDERS UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA SCHOOL OF SOCIAL SCIENCES LECTURER IN SOCIAL ADMINISTRATION (SOCIAL WORK)

UNIVERSITY OF EAST ANGLIA Norwich TEMPORARY LECTURESHIP SPATIAL ANALYSIS

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CARLTON DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION PART-TIME CONSULTANT IN EDUCATION (NEW DIRECTIONS IN SECONDARY EDUCATION)

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CARLTON DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION PART-TIME CONSULTANT IN EDUCATION (NEW DIRECTIONS IN SECONDARY EDUCATION)

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON British Postgraduate Medical Federation REGIONAL POSTGRADUATE DEAN

HORIZONS

The Times Guide to career training A crisis could shape a career

It is a real teaser to guess whether A level candidates or their parents do more nail-biting at this time of year as exam results are published and there begins the free-for-all to squeeze into the few remaining places in higher education.

Despite the efforts of careers teachers and advisers, the six weeks following the results are a bedlam of crisis and uncertainty. What could be an orderly adjustment to a sensible contingency plan often ends up as panic and rout as parents scramble to find alternatives for their offspring.

Although the UCCEA system works tolerably well for university entry, the arrangements in other sectors of higher education could hardly have been worse planned. With a lack of coordination which effectively encourages students to behave irresponsibly in their applications, there is no sure way of knowing which places are going to be filled, particularly at polytechnics, until the first day of term.

The first question has to be whether higher education is necessarily the best thing. In a number of career areas there is a well-kept ladder to get in posts at a level which is less expected and the competition may not be as tough, rather than delaying three or four years only to be in a melee with thousands of other fresh graduates.

When you make your decision, you need to make a quick excursion around the available options. You may well want to make use of UCCEA clearing but only a minority are likely to be successful there. Instead the time has come to delve into the world of polytechnics in Northern manufacturing towns, into the Higher National Diplomas of the Business and Technician Education Council, and the Diplomas in Higher Education - all of which entitle the students to mandatory awards and are fully part of the higher education provision.

Fortunately there are people available to help. Each year the Department of Education and Science coordinates the Advanced and Further Education Information Service (AFEIS) which provides up-to-date details of where vacancies are still on offer. Regular bulletins are sent out to Local Advisory Officers, numbering this year more than a thousand, who will be operating, mostly from the offices of Local Education Authority Careers Services. To get access to this vacancy information and to have an advisory interview all you need do is to contact the local Careers Service for an appointment.

If there is any consolation at all in overlooking a rethink of plans following A level then it is that it provides an opportunity to take stock of medium to long-term career goals. Because of the changes in the employment market, the tightness and competitiveness of traditional professions like the law, and the problems encountered by pure arts and social science graduates, it could well be that it is a better long-term bet to take a less fashionable degree or diploma course which is well-rooted in the real world and has good links, through sandwich or industrial placements, with industry or commerce.

In the next three articles in this series I shall examine in more detail the scope offered by these courses outside the ivory tower world of the University. Next week Edward Fennell writes about vocational degree courses at polytechnics and institutes of higher education.

THE UNIVERSITY OF LEEDS DEPARTMENT OF CIVIL ENGINEERING LECTURER

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIAL ECONOMICS Temporary Lectureship in Accounting

Educational, Careers and Re-training

AN International Career THROUGH The European Business School

1,500 graduates of the European Business School are now working in 30 countries throughout the world. EBS gave them a unique opportunity - an opportunity to gain a firm foundation in Business Management to become effective communicators in English, French and German and to develop the confidence and personal skills which are essential for good management.

EXAM SUCCESS - PROFESSIONAL OR GCE Study at home - pass first time with RRC's Complete Home Tuition Service.

Failed GCE's? Poor Results? Don't Filler in a well established Independent Tutorial College with over 30 years experience.

Learn a foreign language on your own! AUDIO-FORUM offers the best in self-structured foreign language courses using audio cassette tapes.

GCE retakes - Where to go? Consult us about 'O' and 'A' level retakes and get expert advice on tutorial colleges.

THE TRUMAN & KNIGHTLEY EDUCATIONAL TRUST, 78 (T) NOTTING HILL GATE, LONDON W11 3LL. TEL: 01-727 1242.

CAMBRIDGE CENTRE FOR SIXTH FORM STUDIES CCSS is a residential sixth-form college with places for 120 students.

A TRADITION OF SUCCESS DAVIES, LAING & DICK COLLEGE Complete O and A Level Courses. Computer Studies. Re-take Courses.

TUNON HOSTESS SCHOOL One and two year courses in London, commencing September, for career opportunities in tourism, hotels, public and private.

LONDON COLLEGE OF SECRETARIES Comprehensive secretarial training. Residential & day courses. Course completed in 18 months.

UNIVERSITY TUTORIAL COLLEGE Run full-time courses leading to: A Level & BSC HONORS; BSC HONORS IN LAW; BSC HONORS IN BUSINESS STUDIES.

Why take your Degree at Lansdowne College? Complete O and A Level Courses. Computer Studies. Re-take Courses.

BRADFORD TUTORIAL COLLEGE An independent sixth form College. GCE one year A and O level courses. Highly successful A level small group courses or individual tuition.

A LEVELS a second chance CAMBRIDGE TUTORS EDUCATIONAL TRUST Water Tower, Cambridge, Surrey, CR0 5SX.

THE BRITISH SCHOOL OF LOME, WEST AFRICA Small International School, opening September seats experienced and capable secondary teacher for English, History & Geography.

HOGARTH TUTORS 14 Colindale Place London NW9 3PL Tel: 01-370 3912 A & O LEVELS OXBRIDGE November & January intakes 1 & 2 year courses

ST. ANTHONY'S Secretarial College, Bedfordshire. Offers a comprehensive and intensive course with residential and day options.

Vertical text on the right edge of the page, including page number 21 and some illegible text.

Today's television and radio programmes

Edited by Peter Lee

BBC 1

6.00 Ceestax AM News, sport, weather, travel information.
6.30 Breakfast Time. Frank Bough and Sue Cook share the sofa to introduce news at 6.30, 7.00, 7.30, 8.00, 8.30 and 8.55; morning papers delivered at 7.32 and 8.32; Family Finance feature (6.45-7.00) and Country with Glyn Chiswick (8.45-9.00).
6.00 Hey Look... That's What Chris Harris, that is, an eccentric entertainer who seeks out entertaining youngsters on this summer tour in New Zealand.
6.25 Jackanory. Five morning stories by Bertie Doherty and read by Nerys Hughes, each featuring the same gang of children from a northern terrace (1) 6.45 The Wobblers (1.84) Why Did They? School holiday hints (1) 10.10 Close Down.
10.55 Cricket. Over to Lord's for the fourth day of the Third Test between England and New Zealand.
1.05 News, weather with Richard Whitmore and Vivian Cragg. 1.22 Financial Report and subbed news headlines. 1.25 Clocks-Book. Fred Harris with word show for infants (1). 1.40 Clocks: Third Test. 1.40 Play School (see BBC 2, 10.30am) 4.45 Scooby and Scrappy Dog. Cartoon. 5.05 John Craven's Newsround. 5.15 The Red Head Gang and out an SOS in this last chapter of the adventures for children (1). 5.40 News, weather. 6.00 South East at Six. 6.25 Doctor Who: The Visitation. Beware the terribles, untriedly extra-terrestrials menacing 17th century England, according to this dimension-hopping Time Lord. Michael Robbins guests as an actor who assists the Doctor and his companions (1). 6.50 World of Wildlife: Day of the Zebra. Film about the zebra, photographed Maurice Tibbles returned from Africa with this diary of survival, directed by John Sparks and following a day in the life of a family of two. Predatory lions and hyenas are the biggest threats to the wobbly newborn of the family. 7.20 Matt Houston. Hollywood actor Martin Landau guests in this episode as a criminal of international repute whose son seems to be following in his footsteps. Further tries to shoot a senator but is stopped by the playboy private eye. 8.10 Chinese Characters. Impressions of everyday life behind the bamboo curtain, photographed clandestinely by Frenchman Antoine Fourrier during successive visits to Canton. 9.00 News, weather with John Humphrys. 9.25 Film: The Incredible Journey of Dr Meg Laurel (1979) Overlong TV movie offers the erstwhile Bonk Woman Lindsay Wynn as a pioneering physician who returns from the city to introduce modern medicine into a superstitious, bigoted, hillbilly community in the Appalachian mountains during the 1930s. Jane Wymant plays a sort of local witchdoctor, and her greatest obstacle, while Dorothy McGuire, James Woods and Gary Lockwood also appear. Guy Green also directs Friday night's film. The Magic, though not entirely to blame here. 11.45 News Headlines, weather. 11.50 Close Down.

TV-am

6.25 Good Morning Britain. Nick Owen and Anne Diamond introduce news at 6.30, 7.00, 7.30, 8.00, 8.30, 8.55; Sport 6.45, 7.45, 8.30; Morning papers at 7.00; Sunner summary from Irene Harnd for Help the Aged 7.00; Diet with Diana Dora, 7.10 (from Friday); Star Romance at 8.05; Roland Rat, meanwhile, visits Oxford from 9.00.
ITV LONDON
9.25 Thames news headlines, followed by Science International, 10.25 Science International, 11.00 London News on Prinkie, 11.50 Cartoon Time.
12.00 We'll Tell You a Story. 12.10 Let's Pretend. 12.10 The Quasars. Brian Trueman writes out play scripts, from playwright to British Leyland, who have bonded together a 115 mph speed and alloy prototype giving an available 61 mpg.
1.30 The Chase.
1.30 The Chase.
2.30 News: Nowhere to Hide (1977). US Marshall Lee Van Cleef must lead his man-turned-terrorist Tony Musante to the witness box before the mob get to him.
3.50 Cartoon Time. 4.00 We'll Tell You a Story. Julia McKenzie tells the story of Tubby the Train (1) 4.15 Victor and Suki. 4.20 The New Fantastic Four. 4.45 Musical World: Sky High. Musical drama by the pupils of Hatton School, in Derbyshire, highlights a conflict of personal and communal interests in a close-knit village.
5.15 PS It's Paul Sains. Comedy. News. 5.00 Thames News. 6.25 What Is the World. Sally Hawkins replies to correspondents. 6.35 Crossroads. Terry turns to Kath for a favour. 7.00 The Krypton Factor. Four more for the mind and body challenge. 7.30 Coronation Street. Having applied the beans about local village club closure, Ken Barlow demands anonymity. 8.00 It's Your Move. Having won a prize at the Montreux Festival, the silent comedy by and with Eric Sykes enjoys a rerun. Sykes and Tommy Cooper play cat-and-mouse removal men before an unending newsworld. Richard Briers, Bernard Cribbins, Jimmy Edwards, Irene Handl, Brian Murphy, Andrew Sachs, Bob Todd and Sylvia Syms helped make a hilarious, farcical and quotable comedy. 8.30 World in Action: A Widow's Story. Moving follow-up to the fate of a family whose man fought for the Falklands (see Choice). 9.00 Minder. Terry's old cellmate, John 'Old' Wainwright, returns from Spain, where he runs a pub, eager to open a bodega in Soho. But others settle old scores. (1) 9.30 News at Ten. Followed by Thames News Headlines. 10.30 The Fall Guy. Showbiz nostalgia evoked by a striking film clip and cartoon 78. Sir Carmichael, Leslie Caron and Mike Yarwood are guests of Denis Norden. 11.00 Film: The Long Day's Dying (1958) Morbid anti-war piece has three British parasy lines. Ironically, excoriated from their unit behind enemy lines. Notable for an early appearance by Tom Bell. He co-stars with David Hemmings, Alan Davis and Reginald Kettle. Directed by Peter Collinson's direction. Preview on Oil Rigs. Ends at 1.30. 12.00 Close Down.

CHOICE

pm), World in Action follows up the crucial fate of housewife and mother Elaine Evans, whom we last met when her Royal Marine husband Ken had sailed off to war in the South Atlantic. "Like a bad penny, he'll probably turn up again", his worried wife reassured herself. But just four days after her prediction came true, he was killed in an Argentinean air raid. Statistically, he was one of 250 British servicemen who forsook their lives for the Falklands. Tonight's report asks his widow whether his loss has meant more to her family, one of whom is a Marine cadet as his father once was. Mrs Evans recalls the happy scenes of reconciliation for other families when the Task Force returned trailing clouds of glory. She also reminds us of the harrowing choice faced by all the widows, on whose husbands should be buried. Ken remained, in a corner supposedly now forgotten, and his widow explains how important it is for her visit his grave and the spot where he fell.
● BENDI BENDI BENDI (BBC 2, 7.45 pm) is a delightful, diverting and deliciously sceptical QED report, on the 'balance' of bending spoons by mind over matter. Ten years ago, Yuri Geller scraped a mountain of cutlery to reduce metal and suddenly awakened apparently dormant paranormal powers in youngsters all over the world. The Cyrilus, of course, was all as trickery and sleight of hand, just because the powers seem to desert spoon-benders as soon as a film camera or scientist comes too near.

TONIGHT'S PROM

7.30 Wagner: A Faust Overture
Symphony: Cello Concerto in A minor
8.30 Six Pieces for orchestra, Op. 8. Strauss: Tod und Verklarung. European Community Youth Orchestra. Conductor: Nicola Abbado. Soloists: Natalia Gutman (cello), Radio 3. Stereo.
10.55 Stravinsky: Suite No 1 for Small Orchestra. Violin Concerto (Dmitri Shostakovich). Soloist: Suleika Perini (violin) and Suleika No 2 for Small Orchestra. On record.
11.30 Edgar and Mahler: song recital by Anna Collins (soprano) with Paul Hamburger at the piano. Includes: Schubert's Seven Lieder, Op 16 and Mahler's Fruhlingsbewegung.
12.15 BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra: Mozart (Symphony No 35 in D) and Beethoven (Piano Concerto No 1), played by Angela Brown (piano).
1.00 News.
1.05 The Pleasures of the South: European Community Youth Orchestra. Conductor: Nicola Abbado. Soloists: Natalia Gutman (cello), Radio 3. Stereo.
2.00 Music by British Composers: Includes works by Ireland (A Lullaby), Vaughan Williams (The Pastoral Symphony), Tippett (The Blue Room), and others.
3.00 New Records: Includes Polish Chamber Orchestra playing Chopin's Piano Concerto No 1, and others.
4.55 Mainly for Pleasure. Presented by Natalie Wynn. Includes: Sibelius's Piano Concerto for piano and orchestra (at 6.00).
6.30 Music for Organ: Garton Llobell plays in the Church of the Cross, London. Includes: Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier, Liszt's and Grieg's.
7.05 A Stubborn Skill: Professor John Lucas, Head of English and Drama at Loughborough University, estimates George Crabbe's contribution to the English novel. Readings by Sean Barrett.
7.30 Proms 83: From the Royal Albert Hall. Part one: Wagner and Schumann (see page 2).
8.00 Proms 83: Part two. Western and Eastern (see page 2).
8.30 Proms 83: Part two. Western and Eastern (see page 2).
9.30 Piano Trio: Includes the first UK broadcast of Philip Wilby's Piano Trio and Smetana's Trio in G minor, Op 15 (played by Leonardo Trio).
10.10 Elizabeth Maconchy: Reflections (1981); and The Laidon Echo and The Laidon Echo with the Nash Ensemble and Sarah Leonard (soprano).
10.45 Five Minutes: John Forster reads. Paula Kelly's Murder at Six.

BBC 2

6.05 Open University: Urban Development, 6.55 Maths: 2.20 Cancer, Terminal Care; 7.45 The Adam Smith Lecture; 8.10 Close Down.
10.30 Play School: Sophie and Jack (on BBC 1, 4.20) 10.55 Close Down.
4.15 Cricket, continued Test coverage.
6.15 Topper? Fifteen American television comedy. Respected banker Mr Topper strikes gold in Alaska. Leo G Carroll stars. 6.40 Cartoon Time.
6.50 Six Fifty-five. Class in the courtyard, led by Barbara Cook. The play features the music of an American songbook. Julian Lloyd Webber, Rod Argent and the Gabriel String Quartet assist.
7.25 News summary, weather.
7.30 A Moment to Talk. No clock-out time for those who work out of shot this week. The volunteers group invited by producer Philip Donnell to speak their mind has much to complain about and plenty of time in which to do it. They are all unemployed Asians in Bradford.
7.45 Q.E.D. Bendi Bendi Bendi (see Choice).
8.20 The Paul Daniels Magic Show. Another celebration of unusual powers, like those of Chikamasa Chung Ling Soo, whose show-stopping speciality was to catch on a plate marked bullets fired from a gun. Unfortunately he was killed presenting this feat at the Wood Green Empire in March 1918. Paul Daniels revives the act, though not the man who died. He is assisted by the woman who fired the ill-fated shot 65 years ago. (1)
8.30 Call My Bluff. White stars Frank Muir and Arthur Marshall, assisted Margaret Howard and Tim Rios, Rula Lenska and Nigel Havers.
9.30 One Man and His Dog. Watch heat of the shepherds trial.
10.10 Minder. Dr Anthony Clare to Mrs Weighall, the former General Secretary of the NUR: "What do you mean, 'What do you mean, what was she like?' Dr Clare explains. Mr Weighall replies, "Well, mother played the organ". In factness to the good doctor, Mr Weighall did elaborate, crediting to her his brand of socialism as "non-conformist, based on the Baptist chapel". But it seems to me that this supposedly analytical series has rarely lifted beyond the chat-show level.
10.50 Newsnight.
11.40 Cricket: Test match highlights.
12.00 Open University: Landlip. River village slipped into the sea in 1951; 12.35 Finance of Social Community Work; 1.00 Open University: Preview on Oil Rigs. Ends at 1.30. 12.00 Close.

CHANNEL 4

5.30 Making the Most of... Cheap Thrift series ideas like the Worth Valley Railway, as an example of low cost ideas for fun. Ashley Jackson continues his feature on painting, and ace photographer Heather Angel visits a closed railway embankment.
6.00 Manicaps. Staying with steam, this study of its impact on Britain's green and pleasant landscape considers the impact of the railway in Victorian and Edwardian times, and the legacy of the monumental work for the Great Western.
6.30 Here's Lucy: Lucy Ball as a widow working (on screen) for co-star Gail Gordon, and off for herself, as head of Lucille Ball Productions. This episode marks the end of the series, as she tries to help her kids pay a big bill for her birthday dinner. (1)
7.00 Channel 4 News.
7.50 Comment. Anthony Shang, the Chinese writer and journalist.
8.00 Archie Bunker's Place. His wife Edith's attempts to alleviate the energy crisis demand a strong constitution than Archie's. Carroll O'Connor plays the opinionated hero of Norman Lear's comedy, originally adapted from playwright Spight's The Death Us Do Part, though heavily diluted.
8.30 City Centre Cycling. Round three of the Kellogg's Cycling Championships tears through the sealed-off streets of Nottingham, with the cameras following the riders as they race up with the pack. Manchester and Birmingham become no-go areas in future weeks as riders from Britain and abroad pedal furiously in pursuit of vital league points. The appropriately named Steve Rider is our host.
9.30 Ear to the Ground. News magazine by and for young people examines some of the problems that face would-be Seb Coes and goes into the question of sports sponsorship.
10.30 Film: The Bigamist (1953). He's travelling salesman Edmond O'Brien, "Wanted by two women" according to the posters of the time. They are played by Joan Fontaine and Jane Lupino, who also directed (his inclusion in the current Women on Film season) while Edmund Gwenn is an investigator who uncovers their common secret. To the credit of all concerned, this moribund melodrama rarely wins. Ironically, writer-producer Collier Young was married to both Jane Lupino and Joan Fontaine - though not at the same time.
12.00 Close.

Radio 4

6.00 The Six O'Clock News; Financial Report.
6.30 Quota... Unquoted.
7.20 Start the Week with Richard Baker.
8.00 The Monday Play: The Zimbabwe Tapes by David Cadogan (see Choice).
8.30 Kaleidoscope. Arts magazine.
8.55 Weather.
9.00 The World Tonight: News.
10.30 Science Now.
11.00 A Book at Bedtime: In the Cage by Henry James (1).
11.15 The Financial World Tonight.
11.30 Travel and Transport: programmes in which the adventures and reflections of company directors are recounted (2). Tonight: Militant in the Americas, with John Livesey as narrator.
12.15 Shipping Forecast.
ENGLAND: VHF with above except: 8.25-6.30am Weather: Travel, 1.55-2.00pm Listening Post, 5.55-6.55 PM, 7.00-7.30pm (continued), 11.00pm on 4; Going Solo, 11.30-12.10am Open University.
Radio 3
6.55 Weather, 7.00 News.
7.05 Morning Concert Part one. Haydn (Piano Trio in C, H XVIV Op 50, No 5), and Piano Trio in E minor, Op 54 - Kyung-Wook Chung as soloist.
8.00 Morning Concert: part two. Boyce (Symphony No 8), Ponce, Mendelssohn (Piano Trio in G minor), and Strauss (Symphonies Nos 1 and 2).
9.00 The Week's Composer: Mendelssohn (Cello Sonata in D, Op 58), and Piano Trio in E minor, Op 54 - Kyung-Wook Chung as soloist.
10.00 Schubert and Beethoven: Piano recital by Martin Gruber, Sonata in A minor, Op 57, and Sonata in F minor, Op 57.
BBC 1 BBC Wales: 1.22-1.25 News Summary, 1.45-1.50 Close Down.
BBC 2 BBC Wales: 1.22-1.25 News Summary, 1.45-1.50 Close Down.
BBC 4 BBC Wales: 1.22-1.25 News Summary, 1.45-1.50 Close Down.

FREQUENCIES: Radio 1: 105.3kHz/285m; Radio 2: 693kHz/433m; 909kHz/330m; Radio 3: 1215kHz/247m; VHF 90-92.5; Radio 4: 200kHz/150cm; VHF 92-95; LBC 152kHz/261m; VHF 97.3; Capital: 154kHz/194cm; VHF 95.8; BBC Radio London 1458kHz/208m; VHF 94.9; World Service MF: 648kHz/463m.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
EXPORT YOUR PRODUCTS TO AUSTRALIA
AUSTRALIAN EXPORTER specialising in advice and direct marketing techniques is seeking English speaking...

PROPERTY AGENCIES OR CORRESPONDENTS
Spanish Construction Company requires
LANZAROTE, CANARY ISLANDS, SPAIN.
Time-sharing at attractive prices.
High rate of commission offered for marketing.

CONTRACTS AND TENDERS
State Transport Authority
Adelaide, South Australia
PUBLIC TRANSPORT TICKET
VALIDATING EQUIPMENT
Registration for Registration of Instrument for Assessment of Needs and Equipment Supply

FORTHCOMING AUCTIONS
HOME AND GARDEN
BEAT THE BURGLAR
BOLTON SECURITY SYSTEMS.
BACK BRADSHAW CHAPEL, BRADSHAW, BOLTON, BL5 2EW.

CONCERTS
BARBARIC AIR-COMD 01-428 8796 or 01-524 8881 (see page 2)
THEATRES
ALBERT A. Comedy: 8.30-9.15
ALBERT A. Comedy: 8.30-9.15
ALBERT A. Comedy: 8.30-9.15

THEATRES
ALBERT A. Comedy: 8.30-9.15
ALBERT A. Comedy: 8.30-9.15
ALBERT A. Comedy: 8.30-9.15

REGIONAL TELEVISION VARIATIONS BORDER As London except:
CENTRAL As London except:
GRANADA As London except:
HIV WEST As London except:
HIV WALES As HIV West except:

EXHIBITIONS
ART GALLERIES
PALACE 437 6334 or 437 8307
NOW OPENING THROUGH 1983
SONG AND DANCE
LULU IN TELEVISION ON A SUNDAY
VARIATIONS
A CABARET MUSICAL

Looking back with the Great Western

By Kenneth Gosling
When the photographers of the Great Western Railway went out with their slide cameras at the turn of the century...

Mr Brock: Cataloguing the past.

Letter from Moscow
Andropov breaks with the seaside routine

Where do Russian leaders go in summer? The traditional answer is the Black Sea, although in this (as in other things) Mr Andropov seems to have a style of his own.
The first elite dachas at Sochi were built at the turn of the century...

Richard Owen

THE TIMES INFORMATION SERVICE

The Times Crossword Puzzle No 16,208

Grid for crossword puzzle No 16,208 with numbered squares for letters.

- ACROSS
1 Fine art that adds fictitious detail (10)
6 Polish enthusiast (4)
10 Early stages Wordsworth connected with heaven (7)
11 Sound advice to act as old magistrate, so as to dispossess (7)
12 Angel about nearly all French hangers-on (9)
13 Makes flat for senior churchman in quarters (5)
14 A cast n's a pleasure to have (5)
15 Science of words is gloomy yet needs revision (9)
17 Dangerous line for those seeking promotion in Lilliput (9)
20 One-man drawing device (5)
21 In which Hengist and Horsa break a sword (5)
23 Boy meets girl - divine intuition (9)
25 How to hold something you mustn't touch (2,5)
26 One held by landlord as a man of property (7)
27 How minute a bird can be (4)
28 The fly in the Cock Robin affair (3-7)
DOWN
1 Roman magistrate rising to suppress a letter (5)
2 Suiting - and what it should do when made up (9)

The Solution of Saturday's Prize Puzzle No. 16,207 will appear next Saturday

CONCISE CROSSWORD, PAGE 8

Today's events

Exhibitions in progress
Paintings by Dennis Knight and Constance Stubbs. The Hadleigh Gallery (Odds & Ends Scullery), 131 High Street, Hadleigh, Ipswich. Tues to Sat 10 to 4, Sun 3 to 5, closed Wed afternoon (until Sept 3).
Local Look: Countryside exhibition, Brook, Isle of Wight. Mon to Sat 10.30 to 6.30, Sun 2.30 to 6 (until Aug 31).

Talks, lectures

Kenya and Uganda, by Mike Knowles. Birmingham and Midland Institute, Margaret Street, Birmingham, 10.30.

Music

Orphan recital by Rowland Cotterill. Coventry Cathedral, 1.05. Douglas Town Band, Sea Terminal, Douglas, Isle of Man, 8.

Bond winners

Winning numbers in the weekly draw for Premium Bond prizes are: £100,000, 3K8 9/16553 (the winner comes from Norfolk), £50,000, 10K8 743934 (Norseyshire), £25,000, 22Z8 322904 (London borough of Haringey).

The pound

Table showing exchange rates for Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hong Kong, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, USA, Yugoslavia.

The Times/Halifax house price index

Table showing monthly index average of second-hand houses (seasonally adjusted) from Dec 1977 to Jun 1983 for various regions.

Average regional prices of second-hand houses (not seasonally adjusted)

Table showing average regional prices for North, South, East, and West of England.

Nature notes

Herons still stand on their nests, though their young are fully grown and can only be distinguished by their grey heads and rudimentary crest...

Roads

London and South-east: A13: Roadworks at Alfords Way junction of Moyers Lane, Barking. A308: Temporary lights at Staines Road East, Sunbury, 9.30am to 4pm.

Anniversaries

Birch: Napoleone Bonaparte, Ajaccio, Corsica, 1769; Sir Walter Scott, Edinburgh, 1771; Walter Crane, painter, Liverpool, 1845; James Keir Hardie, founder (1895) of the Independent Labour Party, Legbrannock, Lanarkshire, 1856; Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, composer, London, 1875.

Weather

Pressure will be low in N Britain and high in SE. A weak frontal trough will be over N Scotland

London, Midlands, Central N and S, SE, E, SW England, East Angles, Channel Islands, Wales: Sunny, showers, wind SW, light or moderate, max 26 to 28C (79 to 82F). N Wales, NW, NE England, Lake District, Isle of Man, Bristol or sunny periods, wind SW, moderate, max 22 to 24C (72 to 75F).

London

Yesterday: Temp. max 8m to 8 pm, 26C (79F); min 5 pm to 6 am, 14 (57F); humidity 5 pm, 48 per cent. Rain: 24hr to 6 pm, nil in Sun. 24hr to 6 pm, 7.0mm. Bar, mean sea level, 6 pm, 1012.7 millibars falling.

Highest and lowest

Yesterday: Highest day temp: Finchley (92F); lowest night temp: Cape Wrath (56F). Lowest night temp: Cape Wrath (56F).

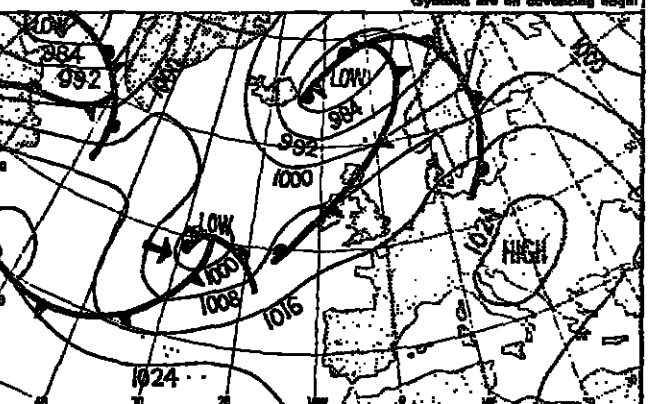

Around Britain

Table showing weather conditions for various cities around Britain: Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, etc.

Yesterday

Table showing yesterday's weather conditions for various cities.

NOON TODAY

High tides

Table of high tide times for various locations including London, Liverpool, Southampton, etc.

Abroad

Table of weather conditions for various international locations: Accra, Algiers, Athens, etc.

Yesterday

Table of yesterday's weather conditions for various international locations.

TEACHER'S. A WELCOME AWAITING.

